Hearnes Pledges Second Term To Work for Better Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY(AP)—Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was sworn in Monday for a second consecutive four—year term and laid his popularity on the line with a pledge to work for a better Missouri, no matter what the cost.

The 45—year—old Democrat thus became the first governor in Missouri history to start a second straight full term. In his first term he pushed through the constitutional amendment which permitted him to run and win a second time.

Hearnes rode a 375,000—vote majority into his second term and saw his victory as a delegation of authority by the people.

"I know what the task means," he said solemnly. "I realize the full responsibility which it involves.

"I begin this term with absolutely no pledge of any kind to prevent me from serving the people of this state with singleness of purpose.

"I would not be honest with you or myself if I did not say that I would enjoy leaving office four years from now in the good graces of my fellow citizens. However, I believe it is a grave mistake for a leader of a state or nation to make popularity his overriding goal.

"I pray God that I may be given the wisdom and prudence to do my duty."Looking back on his first term, Hearnes said the two legislative sessions "achieved a record of performance unmatched in our state's history and, perhaps, unequaled in any other state of the union."

The young governor, a former legislator, scored better than 90 per cent on his legislative proposals in his first term but expects heavy going in the current session.

Now, he said, "the question we face is whether we shall be satisfied to keep pace or whether we want to move sharply ahead."

Compared with many states, he said Missouri might be able to rest on its laurels for a while, but that would be to ignore the challenge to become even better.

Then, in an indirect reference to his proposals for needed tax increases, he said:

"If we had no roads, no schools, no economy or decency in government, or even if we were distinctly inadequate in any given area, Missourians would respond to remedy the situation quickly—no matter what the cost. But even when these deficiencies are not readily seen, it is only a great people who can envision a better way and respond to attain it.

"To do and to be better is a goal few achieve. To do it, we are required to make sacrifices —not in the sense of shedding our blood or the giving of our lives or the lives of those we love, but sacrifice in the sense of giving of a part of those material things which we enjoy in abundance.

"A great people will sacrifice part of that with which they have been blessed in order that their children might be better educated; their less fortunate, more fortunate; their health, better health; their state, a better state.

"I believe this state has awakened to the needs of education, highways, health, welfare, and the many other facets of government that require additional monies.

"It requires self restraint not to attempt too much—and yet it would be foolish and faint—hearted to attempt too little."

The governor said he could not do the job alone.

"I will need the continuing wisdom of the General Assembly," he said, "and a critical dialogue founded upon cooperation, The General Assembly, in turn, will need from the people of our state a commitment of mutual trust, a trust that is both clear and far sighted,

"Our future in years, even in decades, is not beyond our control. the work of our hands, matched with reason and principle, will determine that future."

Cong Attack Destroys 15 Copters

SAIGON (AP)—The Viet Cong blasted their way into the biggest U.S. airfield in the Mekong Delta early today and blew up 15 helicopters worth an estimated $5 million before they were repelled by base defenders.

Another six helicopters were reported damaged in a mortar barrage at the headquarters of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division 40 miles away. One officer called the attacks an "oozing beginning" of the long-awaited enemy offensive in the 14,250 square mile delta south of Saigon.

The Viet Cong attack on Can Tho, 80 miles south of the capital, was the first major ground probe against an allied airfield in several weeks. It hit the headquarters of the U.S. Army's 164th Aviation Group, the nerve center for military operations in the Mekong Delta in the region's biggest city.

Enemy sappers broke through the airfield's defenses under cover of a heavy mortar, rocket and machine-gun barrage that pinned down the Americans while the Viet Cong attached explosives to the helicopters. A barracks area west of the airfield was attacked simultaneously.

Field reports said five cargo and troop-carrying Chinooks and 10 smaller helicopter gunships were destroyed or damaged. U. S. casualties were eight killed and 10 wounded.

The U. S. Command said: "The enemy soldiers were quickly repelled by airfield security personnel, supported by U.S. Army helicopter gunships and a U.S. Air Force Dragon ship," a fixed-wing aircraft equipped with rapid-firing Gatling guns. A spokesman said the American retaliatory fire killed four Viet Cong.

Forty miles north of Can Tho, Viet Cong gunners slammed about 10 mortar rounds into the 9th Division headquarters at Dong Tam. Field reports said there were no casualties but six helicopters were damaged, including the command chopper of Maj. Gen. Julian Ewell, the division commander.

Ten helicopters were damaged at Dong Tam in a similar shelling three days ago.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported three overnight shellings against two district towns and a provincial capital north and northwest of Saigon. A spokesman said two civilians and one policeman were killed and 19 persons were wounded, including 12 civilians, four soldiers and three policemen.

In other ground fighting near the Cambodian border, South Vietnamese rangers claimed killing 35 enemy soldiers 57 miles northwest of Saigon. Two rangers were killed and 22 wounded, including two American advisers.

In the air war, U. S. headquarters announced that a B52 strike 70 miles southwest of Saigon Sunday killed 20 Viet Cong and wiped out 162 enemy fortifications and 18 sampans.

The giant bombers mounted three more missions Sunday night, dropping more than 500 tons of explosives on enemy bases 60 miles north of Saigon.

Symington Files for Fourth Term

JEFFERSON CITY(AP)—Sen. Stuart Symington, St. Louis county Democrat, picked Missouri's inauguration day to file for a fourth term as United States senator.

In an effort to quell rumors that he might challenge Symington for the Democratic nomination in 1970, newly inaugurated Gov. Warren E. Hearnes arranged to accompany Symington to Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick's office.

Symington, now 67, was first elected to the senate in 1952, was re—elected in 1958 and again in 1964, the last time by a whopping 590,000—vote majority.

In the 1968 general election, his son, James W. Symington, was elected to represent the 2nd Congressional District of St. Louis county—the only father—son team in Congress.

Symington recently has advocated pressing ahead with Vietnamese peace negotiations, with or without the cooperation of the Saigon government. In a statement prepared for his filing he said:

"We Americans face problems unprecedented in our history in the domestic as well as the international field. It is clear that upon our ability to cope with these problems rests the future security and wellbeing of our nation."

Symington is the only senator serving on both the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

"I believe my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the executive and legislative branches of our government," he said, "have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America.

"Based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve these two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again the citizens of Missouri give me their confidence and support."

Symington was president of Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. in St. Louis until 1945, then entered government as chairman of the surplus property board.

Later he was administrator of the Surplus Property Administration, assistant secretary of war for air, the first secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board and administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

He resigned from the latter job in 1952 to run for the Senate.

Johnson to Urge Surtax Extension

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson will recommend continuation of the income surtax at 10 per cent in his State of the Union message Tuesday night, it was learned authoritatively today.

Johnson apparently received word from President-elect Nixon that he would go along with the tax surcharge extension.

It was not immediately clear for how long Johnson will urge extension of the tax, which would expire June 30 unless Congress acts to continue it.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said Sunday he thinks Nixon would go along with the tax as long as the Vietnam war continues with high expenditures.

The tax brings in about $13 billion a year and Johnson is said to have determined that he could not submit a balanced budget to Congress Wednesday unless the revenue from what has generally been regarded as a war tax is continued.

Johnson has decided to submit a balanced budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It would forecast a small surplus in revenues over expenditures.

Nixon is at liberty to revise this budget but its basic assumptions on revenue and expenditures could be changed only with great difficulty.

George Christian, White House news secretary, said at a briefing that submission of the budget Wednesday will be followed by an economic message Thursday.

In a nationally televised and broadcast personal appearance before a joint session Tuesday night, Johnson is expected to outline briefly his view of his administration's record and make specific recommendations for future actions. His message, still being written, is expected to be considerably shorter than previous similar messages.

Johnson scheduled a seris of meetings today before his expected late afternoon departure for New York City. There, he and Mrs. Johnson will be honored dinner gusts at a Plaza Hotel affair to be attended by about 400 persons. Many of the hosts are New York State Democrats.

Johnson started his final week in office today with the prospect that he may leave his successor a budget of some $195 billion to operate the government the next fiscal year

Although he can point to a record run of prosperity during his tenure, Johnson may feel impelled to warn against the rising wave of inflation that has pushed bank loan interest rates to a record high and is reflected in the soaring cost of living.

At home Johnson can point to his administration's programs to grapple with the problems of the breakdown of law and order, racial rioting, decaying cities, water and air pollution, and poverty.

Johnson is expected to review the nation's achievements in space exploration and to recommend full-scale continuance of that program.

Children Play Inauguration Ceremony Role

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Kids played a prominent part in Monday's inaugural ceremonies in Missouri.

Most of them got into the limelight at the noon swearing in ceremonies. The older ones plan to dress up in their finery for the inaugural ball.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' three daughters shared honors as they held the Bible while their father took the oath of office for the second time. They are Lynne, 19; Leigh, 16, and Julie B., 10.

Lisa Morris, 11, officiated with the Bible while her father, Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, was sworn in.

For Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick the Bible holding honors were performed by his two grandchildren, Larry Kirkpatrick, 10, and Dee Anne, 6. Treasurer William E. Robinson's only son, Thomas, a Lincoln University student, held the Bible for his father. For Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, the only Republican elective official, the Bible was held by two of his daughters, Eleanor, 8, and Mary, 5. The other two are still too young to participate—D. D., 16 months, and Jody, three months.

Inaugural Hoopla Prevails

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Missouri's stately Capitol looked down today on a new chapter in history—the inauguration of the first governor ever to win a second straight four-year term.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, 45year-old veteran of the legislative and political wars, was sworn in at high noon by Judge Lawrence Holman, chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court.

He was preceded in the oath taking by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, the first Republican to win state office since 1940, and the three other Democrats swept in on the Hearnes tide last November—Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick and Treasurer William E. Robinson.

An estimated 14,000 or more persons jammed this little capital city for the all day hoopla—and they had a fine day for it, with thin, high clouds and the temperature near 40.

The governor, state officials and most of the governor's 1,030 honorary colonels paraded through downtown Jefferson City in a preliminary show. Eleven bands and many military units added to the color.

After watching the 50-minute parade from a reviewing stand on the river side of the capitol, the dignitaries moved to the south steps where temporary stands were erected beneath the towering statue of Thomas Jefferson.

The colonels and other visitors sat in thousands of folding chairs. A National Guard blower carried heat to the stands where the officials and their families were seated.

As the governor was sworn in, a 19-gun salute boomed and echoed between the Missouri River bluffs which once saw Lewis and Clark toil up the muddy river.

Missouri's two U.S. senators, Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton, greeted the crowd briefly. Symington planned to file for a fourth term later in the day.

In a short inaugural address the governor looked ahead to a finer Missouri and pleaded with the legislature and the citizenry to help him achieve it.

When the ceremonies before a joint outdoor session of the legislature were over, the honorary colonels were bused to the National Guard Armory for lunch. Their wives ate at Sellinger Center in the St. Peter's Catholic Church complex across the street from the Capitol.

The governor and Mrs. Hearnes entertained state officials and their families at a luncheon at the Executive Mansion, scene of a five-hour military reception Sunday.

Tonight a reception will be held in the executive offices for state officials, Supreme Court judges and commissioners and legislators and their wives.

One Injury On Area Highways

This was one of the best weekends in months concerning the number of accidents that occurred in southeast Missouri.

The Highway Patrol said Vickie Baylor, 16, Cape Girardeau, was slightly injured 5 a.m. Saturday when a 1955 Chevrolet in which she was riding failed to round a curve about 10 miles north of Cape Girardeau near Trail of Tears State Park.

Driver of the auto was James Price, 20, Jackson.

This was the only accident with injuries in district 10.

Grass Fire

Sikeston firemen answered an alarm 1:45 p.m. Sunday to extinguish a grass fire at 415 Illinois. No damage was reported.

Two Thefts Reported

Sikeston police had two thefts reported during the weekend.

Al Burrows, 868 West Malone, reported nine stereo tape recordings and a shotgun were stolen Sunday from his automobile. Value of the items is $69.

James Russell Terry, 221 Luther, reported a .22 caliber pistol was stolen Saturday night from his house.

East Prairie Youth Killed Accidentally

CHARLESTON -- Roy DeWayne Farmer, 12, East Prairie, was killed in a hunting accident at 3:15 p.m. Sunday about eight miles east of Charleston near the Mississippi River levee.

Authorities said the accident happened when the youth's brother, Van Allen Farmer, 14, was unloading his 16-guage shotgun. The gun discharged and the shot struck the boy in the chest.

Hunting with the youths were their father, Calvin Farmer, two cousins, Thomas and Bill Smotherman, and an uncle, James Smotherman. They had been rabbit hunting.

Young farmer was loaded into his uncle's automobile and died enroute to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

"Casey at the Bat," the legendary baseball poem, was first recited May 1, 1888, by DeWolf Hopper in a New York City theater.

Third Weekend Hijack Bid Foiled When Stewardess Slams Door in Gunman's Face

MIAMI (AP)—An attempted hijacking of a Delta Airlines jet en route to Miami from Detroit was foiled early today when a stewardess disregarded a passenger's shotgun and slammed the cabin door in his face, police said.

The attempt came hours after the victims of two weekend hijackings had returned from Cuba.

The Dade County sheriff's department said local and federal officers arrested Kenneth Earl McPeek, 31, of Orchard Lake, Mich., when the plane landed at Miami International Airport. His 3-year-old son was taken into protective custody.

Officers said they went to the airport after the plane's captain radioed the Miami airport that he had a man aboard with a shotgun.

The sheriff's department said McPeek told them he carried the shotgun aboard the plane in a duffel bag. The weapon was found under his seat, unassembled and again in the bag, the officers said.

Stewardess Lynne Sargeant of Miami Springs, Fla., told authorities she was accosted by a passenger who placed a shotgun in the pit of her stomach. The passenger told her to tell the captain he was going to Havana.

Instead, police said, Miss Sargeant slammed the door of the cockpit and locked it. The would-be hijacker apparently gave up the idea of a forced flight to Havana at that point, officers said.

Three times Sunday, airplanes swooped into Miami with victims of Saturday's two airline hijackings. The returning planes carried a band of laughing students, people bleary-eyed from loss of sleep and an airliner crew whose captor insisted on a radio message to "tell Fidel Red is coming."

A Convair jet of the Peruvian national airline—APSA—was 10 minutes out of Miami when a gun-brandishing man took over.

Co-pilot Eric Schrieber said the hijacker—whose Mexican passport identified him as Jesum Amaya—told the flight crew: "My life doesn't matter. Neither do the lives of you or the passengers. I want to go to Havana."

Schrieber added: "He didn't speak with a Mexican accent. He could have been anything."

Capt. George Wagner, 46, of Pompano Beach, Fla., turned the jet toward Havana. But a public address system failure kept him from informing his passengers. The plane carried 110 people, including about eighty 15 to 18-year-old Argentine students en route to this country in an exchange program.

"We saw the palm trees and thought it was Miami," Maria Eugenia Gonsebatt, 17, of Entre Rios, Argentina, said. "And then we saw the 'Welcome to Havana' sign.

Trude Holler, a 17-year-old Buenos Aires student bound for Long Beach, Calif., said, "I thought how awful. I thought Miami would be much nicer."

University of Havana students were bused to the airport to mingle with the Argentines.

"It was clear they were trying to propagandize us," said David Edward Kostzer. The 15-year-old from Tucoman, Argentina, will study at La Habra, Calif.

The Cuban and Argentine students traveled about Havana in buses then were driven to Varadero, a coastal city, to spend the night in a luxury hotel and await return to Miami aboard a chartered plane sent by the U. S. State Department.

A dozen hours after the Peruvian plane landed in Cuba a man with close-cropped red hair boarded a United Air Lines jet at Jacksonville, Fla. Shortly after it roared off toward Miami, he suggested he would like to go to Havana. A stewardess shrugged off the idea.

"I thought it was a joke," Pat Overcast of Miami Springs, Fla., related later. "A lot of passengers say that."

The man drew a revolver from a briefcase to enforce his request.

"We're on our way," Capt. M. D. Guyot of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the pilot, said.

Guyot said the man was about six feet tall, weighed about 220 pounds and "would go from extreme friendliness and rage in the same instant." He instructed the pilot to radio Havana and "tell Fidel Red is coming."

At one point the hijacker became convinced the plane was on the ground in Cuba and tried to get the crew "to open the door at 10,000 feet," Guyot said. In Havana, he popped the door open before stairs were rolled up and dangled from the ledge until Cuban militiamen helped him down.

The United passengers were bused to Varadero also, but the Peruvian plane's passengers and their Cuban hosts had filled the hotel rooms. And the 13 Americans got coffee and sandwiches instead of the steaks offered the Argentines.

The Peruvian plane returned to Miami Saturday night. Its passengers came back on two flights Sunday with the United group riding the second aircraft. The United Boeing 727 jet also returned Sunday. United officials said a passenger listed only a Mr. Helmey stayed behind.

The hijackings were the fourth and fifth of the year.

MEMBERS OF THE SIKESTON Sing-Out Group held a rehearsal yesterday at the First Christian Church along with Sing-Out Semo Group from Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau. The groups will present a joint-program in April. The college group was formed just recently and has about 25 members. POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
STRIKE TWO

Traditionally, the post of Secretary of Interior has gone to a representative of one of our western states. President-elect Nixon set a new precedent by going to the very western-most of our States, Alaska, and chose Governor Walter Hickel. There are a lot of axes to be ground in the Department of Interior, and it was inevitable that there would be criticism of the appointment of Governor Hickel. The factions contending for favorable decisions in the department had hoped for a man more closely identified with the problems of conservation.

Thus, Governor Hickel had a strike against him because he was not committed to either camp, which is the best possible reason for Nixon's having selected him.

But the good Governor now has heard strike two called even before he sets foot in that monstrous Interior building, and he collected this one swinging. It seems that the reporters confronted Governor Hickel with the comments of some of his critics and one asked, in particular, how he felt about Julia Butler Hansen's lack of enthusiasm for his nomination.

"Who," said the Governor, "is Julia Butler Hansen?"

To be sure more people have heard of Spiro T. Agnew than Julia Butler Hansen, but if there is one man in the United States who should have known everything possible about her, right down to what kind of flowers she likes to keep on her office desk, it was Governor Walter Hickel.

For twenty years Julia Butler Hansen was a member of the State Legislature in the sovereign State of Washington. In 1960 she went to Washington, D. C., as Congresswoman from the Third District in that State and last year was appointed Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies.

In other words, Julia Butler Hansen is probably the most influential single member of the House of Representatives as far as appropriations for the Department of Interior are concerned.

It is good that Governor Hickel is accustomed to the sometimes bitter cold of Alaska. We suspect it will be as nothing compared with the atmosphere when he appears to present his first budget request and Madame Chairman begins to ask questions.

DON'T DESTROY OLD VALUES

A few weeks back an advertising piece arrived at our desk and inside we found a rather long, tapered nail with a rectangular head. We showed it about the office; of seven co-workers, only one knew, or could guess, what it was.

It was a horse-shoe nail.

An acquaintance who admires and collects such things, received a Brant decoy at Christmas. It was a beautifully hand-carved decoy of the prized wild Canadian goose. But the well-meaning friend who happened upon it had sandpapered and polished away every delicate coloring which remained on the weathered original - and then lacquered it. It ended up looking as much like a Brant decoy as a chocolate replica at the canda counter.

And then there was the man who received a brick at Christmas. It had been promised by a friend who knew the family association with a brick kiln which was being razed to make way for some new modern installation or other. The brick arrived, one of those last pieces rescued from the kiln site. It had been gilded.

It is such a fantastic age that even as young men circle the moon and send us photographs of our little earth from 240,000 miles into the universe, there are some of us trying to keep pace who had intimate and important experiences with brick kilns and horse-shoe nails in our lifetime. Those brick kilns were responsible for sturdy, warm homes which gave shelter and comfort to thousands of families across our land, and we've noted that they are particularly prized by a generation of newly rich who long to own, restore and refurbish them with modern gadgetry.

Before the supermarket deep-freeze, there were many homes which fancied a Brant goose, lured to the table by a decoy, as a welcome respite from smoked ham or corned beef. Many with such recollections are still active today; some of them rode, or walked and led horses to the blacksmith for shoes; some even milked cows, by hand, never dreaming that a machine would someday do the job. One that we know has the milking stool as a foot stool in his living room as a constant reminder. It is the way it was, and it can't be changed by gilding the bricks or polishing the decoys.

Old values mustn't be destroyed. They document our progress, not our backwardness; they make us proud, not decadent.

"THE CENSOR ALWAYS RINGS TWICE"

Censorship is an ugly word to most americans. Yet, our constituional right as a free people to read freely is one which needs to be strenuously guarded, always, if we are not eventually to succumb to the same kind of odious thought-control we see exercised in other countries around the globe. Unfortunately, there are among us individuals and groups who would infiltrate and weaken the very foundation of free thought spelled out and guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution of this country. Freedom to read is the basic right of free men in a democratic society. The men who write the Constitution meant it to be just that way. Neither time nor circumstances have diminished the essence of the democratic philosophy thus expressed.

Freedom cannot possibly exist if special interest groups are allowed to determine what we shall or shall not read. The danger to our freedom lies, paradoxically, in the fact of freedom itself. For would-be censors, too, enjoy the freedom to speak out. And, speak out they can, and do. The best defense of freedom to read is in a constant awareness of, and prompt action to circumvent, any move which threatens an abridgment of the American right to read material on any subject.

Censorship can take many forms. For example, a St. Charles County group while not calling for outright book-banning has organized a move which, as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says, "is an ingenious gimmick. Instead of calling for an old-fashioned bookburning, it is demanding the labeling of all publications by writers who belong to 'subversive' organizations. They are not interferring with the freedom to read, they say, but are sure that such a label on a book or magazine, rather like the 'poison' label on a bottle, will insure that 'the reading material loses 99 percent of its effectiveness and is no longer dangerous'". The Post-Dispatch goes on to point out that Dr. Spock's baby book is one of their targets, for while the book may not be subversive the author, because of his anti-draft conviction, would be classified as subversive.

The Kansas City Star, referring to the same St. Charles County case said, "Censorship is a tricky business. To do it well, one has to be able to read with a measure of intelligence. And, anyone who can do that generally has sense enough to trust others to do the same - and to judge the contents for themselves".

In the forefront of the struggle to maintain the principle of free-reading are several powerful groups. There are, first, the news media to whom "free press" means exactly that, the public libraries and, the Missouri, the Freedom of Information Center, supported largely by the free press, at the University of Missouri.

The American Library Association "Library Bill of Rights", takes the firm stand that "censorship should be challenged by libraries in the maintenance of their responsibility to provide public information and enlightenment". And further, "libraries should cooperate with all persons and groups concerned with resisting abridgment of free expression and free access to ideas".

In support of the ALA position on censorship, the Missouri Library Association voted unanimously at its annual Conference last October, to take positive action aimed at insuring freedom to read. The MLA Intellectual Freedom Committee set forth the guidelines for this effort, which calls on qualified librarians to select and acquire books and other materials without interference from idividuals or groups, and to oppose restrictive legislation at state, local or school district levels. Questions. Questions of censorship which arise may, if necessary, be aired through public hearings at which all sides of the issues will be presented to the library governing body and the general public.

On February 7, a Conference on Censorship will be held on the University of Missouri campus at Columbia under the sponsorship of the Freedom of Information Center, the Missouri Library Association and the Missouri State Library. The Conference theme, "The Censor Always Rings Twice", underscores the necessity for free people to be concerned and to take prompt action on censorship issues - otherwise censorship tends to recur in frequency and force.

The Conference is important to everyone having an interest in the matter of free access to all reading material. Opportunity will be provided for those attending to engage in discussion of the problem and hear key speakers and view exhibits dealing with the subject.

The question of censorship is one in which every American has a vested interest. Conferences such as this one are all to the good; for they are a means of providing an understanding of the censorship problem in its many ramifications.

Further details on the Conference can be obtained by writing Freedom of Information Center, Box 858, Columbia, Missouri, 65201.

NEW YORK (AP) - What's nice guy like Tony Curtis doing strangling women, even if it is only a film?

Curtis chuckled when he was jokingly asked the question, then said seriously, "It's a wonder there isn't more of it."

He then went into a rather philosophical discussion of the socio-psychological background of the sexually-perverted killer who terriorized the Boston area for more than a year, slaying at least 13 women - the part Curtis portrays in "The Boston Strangler."

It didn't sound much like the tough kid from the slums of Manhattan, who became a romantic comedy actor.

It was a "new" Curtis. No gray flannel suit scene for him any more, but short jacket, scarf tie and necklace of mementoes. Plus a new wife, outside the film fold. Following actresses Janet Leigh and Christine Kaufmann into the role of Mrs. Curtis is Leslie Allen, 24, a former model from Boston.

As something of a left-handed compliment, the Tony Curtis of "The Boston Strangler" neither looks like the handsome 43-year-old Tony Curtis who fans of "Some Like It Hot" "Operation Petticoat" and "Who Was That Lady" came to love, laughingly, nor acts like the Tony Curtis of romantic comedy success.

The light comedy image disappears, physically and thespically.

"I wanted to do another kind of movie," he said, enjoying an outdoor chat at a New York "pocket park."

The title role in "The Boston Strangler" was a part he really wanted and he sought it as soon as he heard 20th-Century Fox had planned to film Ferold Frank's book.

"Fox was not enthused," Curtis recalled. "With all my comedy roles and all, they thought the audience wouldn't sit still for me as the strangler.

"So, I put on a wax putty nose, a big lump on my face and took my own photos and sent them to Fox. At least it showed them I could look the part."

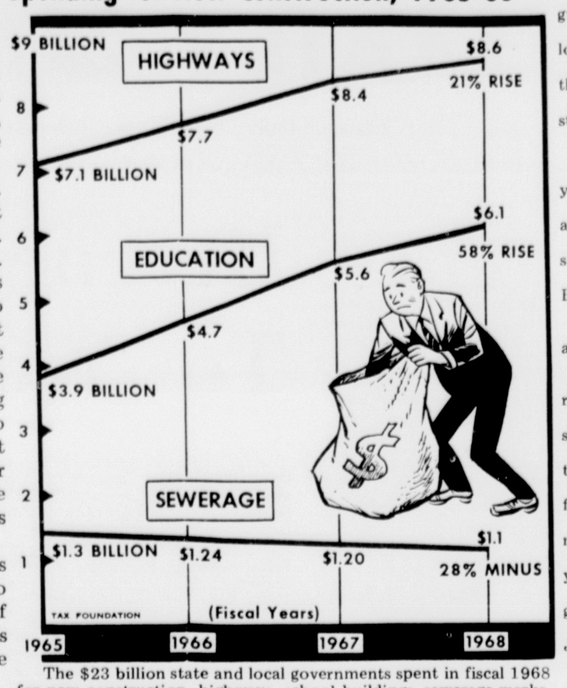
When it came to actual filming, he put on brown contact lenses to cover his baby blues, used a lip appliance to change the contour of his mouth - and to alter his speech - and carried lead weights around his waist to change the tempo of his walk.

And he read a great deal about Albert DeSalvo, who was claimed to be the Boston strangler. Curtis speaks with some authority when discussing the man he portrays in the film. His efforts, mental and physical, show how important the role is for Curtis, who hopes it will alter the course of his screen career, much as he attempted in 1957, with "Sweet Smell of Success," and followed with "The Defiant Ones," for which he got an Oscar nomination.

What's next for the man who proved his dramatic point in "The Boston Strangler".

The film role of gangster Bugsy Siegel. Hardly comedy.

Spending for New Construction, 1965-68



The $23 billion state and local governments spent in fiscal 1968 for new construction, highways, school buildings, sewerage works, hospitals, water supply, etc., was 9 percent greater than in 1967. State construction spending was up 5 percent; local, higher by 12 percent. The trend of three new construction items is shown.

Approximately one out of seven vehicles were rejected in Missouri during last year's voluntary vehicle safety-check program.

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports that 24,121 vehicles went through the safety-check lanes and 3,670 were rejected because of some unsafe item. A total of 6,465 unsafe items were found on the vehicles inspected.

Faulty front lights, tires and rear lights were the top three causes for rejection. Defective rear turn signals, front turn signals and brakes followed in that order.

The Vehicle Safety-Check Program is sponsored on he national level by the Auto Industries Highway Safety Committee in Washington, D.C. The State Highway Patrol is the coordinator of the program in Missouri.

Colonel E.I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Patrol Superintendent, called attention to the fact that of the six items most often named as cause for rejection, four could affect visibility. He noted that improperly adjusted headlights can fail to pick up a hazard in the road ahead or blind an oncoming driver. A burned-out bulb in a turn signal can literally leave other motorists in the dark about a driver's intentions.

'We can expect that most of those who went through the voluntary vehicle safety-check lanes thought their vehicles were in safe mechanical condition," Hockaday stated. "Yet, a good number of unsafe items were discovered on the vehicles that were inspected. The results of this voluntary program indicate the importance of having compulsory inspection of vehicles which is now effective in Missouri."

OPERATION

This don't hurt much. I guarantee,
You've needed this surgery long,
My gentle hands will point the way,
To a new life proud and strong,
So let my scalpel do the job,

Now, Bob, get hold of yourself,
No more will you sit and cry alone,
Abandoned on some dusty shelf.
Breathe deeply of this ether, Bob,
Let's see that old time grin,
Oh, nurse, I think he's fast asleep,
And now it's time to begin.
A deft snip here...a pluck right there,
Scalpel...sponge...and that suture,
A little off here...a snip off there,
And now, Bob, arise to your future.
That didn't hurt you, did it now?
We're through..you're on your own,
So fix your face, come on, get up,
And give me a kiss, my sweet Joan.

THINKING TO RESTRAIN his wife's extravagence, the husband presented her with an account book and gave her fifty dollars.

"Write down what I give you one one page," he explained, "and on the opposite page write down what happens to it. That will enable you to know how much you have spent at the end of any given time."

When next her husband asked to see the book, his wife told him eagerly "I did just as you told me. See."

On one page was written: "Received $50."

On the opposite page was noted: "Spent it all."

Darned Good Show -- It is a flight of fancy to expect that U.S. policemen, like their British counterparts, will ever reach a mutual disarmament treaty with the underworld. Americans remain too wedded to their weapons.

But they might profitably study how the London police handled the recent orgy of demonstrations by 30,000 anti-Vietnam war and anti-American groups, whose behavior was not appreciably more refined than that of our own peace-lovers in Chicago.

The Bobbies did not even reach for their truncheons (the only weapons they carry) but literally used body English to keep the mobs under control. A thin blue line of 50 of them prevented one mob from rushing the American embassy.

In so doing, they took a lot of lumps and missed the satisfaction of cracking a lot of hairy heads. But they also won a clear-cut moral victory over the anarchists, while brillantly reinforcing their famous image as first-class, professional lawmen.

Doc Duncan

H.L. Hunt Says

"THE "GREAT COMPROMISE'

The next Amendment to the U.S. Constitution will be, in all probability, a change in the means of electing our President. Many methods have been proposed, each with its merits, and each with its shortcomings.

One method would abolish the Electoral College in its entirely, allowing the President and Vice President to be elected by direct popular vote.

Emotionally, this proposal sounds good. It sounds good today and it sounded good when the Constitution was written. However, our Founding Fathers recognized the fact then that the larger, more populous states would dominate the less populous ones in the Presidential Elections. The "Great Compromise" was thus reached--providing for the Electoral College--where ethnic and regional interests were taken into consideration in this most important election.

These interests were prevalent then and are even more so today. It is because of this balance of power in the choice of selecting our President that our Presidents have been of the highest character, maintaining an interest in all areas of the nation and not in just those states that elected them. Under the popular vote method, it would be possible for a dozen or fewer states to elect the President and his active interest would thus be reflected.

Of significant difference is the Congressional District Plan for reforming the Electoral College. Under this plan, the Electors would be chosen at local levels and therefore follow the wishes of their constituents. The Electors would be chosen, one for each Congressional District, plus two at-large, equaling the U.S. Senators in each State, and each pledged to vote for a specific candidate. The unit rule would thus be discarded and the same proficiency in electing our Presidents, only at a more equitable balance, would be maintained. HLH

Washington - Merry Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Black students Harass liberal colleges with threatening demands; Known Black revolutionary sparks trouble at Swarthmore; Colleges face problems in getting qualified Negro students

WASHINGTON - On December 23, Black students in several well known liberal colleges issued peremptory demands on their college presidents which had all the earmarks of a revolutionary conspiracy

The colleges selected were Swarthmore, outside Philadelphia; Brandeis University, outside Boston; and Pembroke College, outside providence. The letters were similar to the unreasonable demands made at San Francisco state college, and followed the general revolutionary pattern set last year by Berlin students when they stormed the offices of Axel Springer, the anti-communist publisher.

Simultaneously Samuel R. Jordan, Jr., convicted of attempting to blow up selective service headquarters 83, 84 and 85 at Lancaster, Pa., and well known as a black revolutionary, turned up at Swarthmore, though not a student there, to inspire trouble. He worked with Fainia Davis, a Negro senior, who has publicly stated she intends to foment revolution after she graduates in February.

Jordan is out on bond, pending appeal on the interesting claim that Molotov cocktails which he tossed into the Lancaster draft board are not "explosive." Why Lancaster authorities have permitted Jordan to be at large to stir up revolutionary activities elsewhere is not known.

The letter submitted to the college presidents was signed at Swarthmore by Clinton Ethridge, a Negro senior who is head of the Swarthmore African-American students, and it began with a salute to President Courtney Smith: 'Merry Christmas!" It then warned that unless Smith accepted publicly and unequivocally certain "non-negotiable" demands by noon, January 7, "We will take action to see that they are accepted."

PROBLEM OF ENLISITNG NEGROES

The demands to admit more Negroes, ironically, were quite similar to plans which a faculty committee on admissions had been formulating in order to encourage more Negro students to attend. However, when the demands were presented in the form of non-negotiable threats, the ultimatum was turned down, and one day after the deadline of noon, January 7, passed, the black militants at Swarthmore chainlocked the door on the administration building and took over the administrative office of the college.

Simultaneously, members of the faculty received 15 telegrams from Bayard Rustin, the Negro leader, all in identical language, asking for acceptance of the demands. Rustin, a former member of the young communist league, has of late been one of the more moderate Negro leaders.

Ironically, Swarthmore, Bryn Maur, Brandeis, Harvard, Haverfod and a long list of other colleges have been doing their best to encourage Negro enrollment. However, the problem has been to secure Negroes who can meet scholastic requirements. Generous scholarships are available for Negro students. In fact, Negroes occupy a privileged position when it comes to entering Ivy League colleges, and have far more economic opportunity than white students. However, deans of admission have taken the position that there is no use admitting an unprepared Negro student who is likely to flunk out in his first year.

Talent scouts have gone out, as in the days when Ivy League colleges were recruiting football players, to try to enlist qualified Negroes. Last year, Ohio Wesleyan offered a scholarship to a well qualified Negro Girl only to be outbid by the University of West Virginia, which offered the girl an over-all expense allowance of $4,500 annually.

Swarthmore, a year ago, spotted a well qualified Negro boy only to have him taken away by Harvard, which offered him a more liberal scholarship.

Following the ultimatums handed to colleges before Christmas, authorities sat down with black power leaders to explain their hope of admitting more Negroes, but also the scarcity of qualified Negroes. They were told by the black power group in Swarthmore to look south and west.

Actually Bryn Mawr has sent some talent scouts to the west coast, only to find that Reed College in Oregon, and occidental and Pomona colleges in California are also recruiting Negro students. Few are to be found. In the south, Atlanta University and other institutions are also on the alert for qualified Negroes. Mayor Ivan Allen of Atlanta has stated that Negro graduates have ample opportunities available, and that he has been seeking 400 Negro high school graduates for the Atlanta fire and police departments.

PEREMPTORY DEMANDS

Despite this, the African-American students at Swarthmore peremptorially demanded the dismissal of dean of admissions Frederick Hargadon for failure to admit more Negroes.

The great majority of students at these colleges has been out of sympathy with the militant Black minority; Likewise, the majority of the faculties. Clinton Ethridge, the Black power leader at Swarthmore, is certain to flunk, and also certain to claim he's being discriminated against. Real reason he is certain to flunk is that he has devoted so little time to his studies.

Samuel Jordan, the convicted Molotov cocktail thrower, was a senior at Franklin and Marshall College in Pennsylvania who, at 2:42 a.m. May 10, 1968, was seen by police with other Negro students departing from Lancaster with arms, and material for Molotov cocktails. At 3 a.m. Jordan was arrested, and found to be carrying a loaded 38 revolver and Molotov cocktail ingredients. A search warrant was sworn out, and his apartment was found to contain various ingredients for incendiary bombs. Jordan was the leader of the Franklin and Marshall Afro-American society. He was convicted September 20, then turned up at Swarthmore recently to direct revolutionary activities there.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dockers' Hook: President Nixon.s First Crisis: Waterfron-Crippling Strike

New York: -- For weeks, that one-man crisis-monger, longshoremen's strike leader, Teddy Gleason, has been awaiting a phone call from the skyscraper "White House" here, now teeming with Richard Nixon's cabinet members. Presidents always call when the nation's docks are paralyzed. But the presidency is in limbo.

Even if it weren't, the call might not have come. Nor will it ever.

Mr. Nixon and his Secretary of Labor, George Shultz, who never loses his cool, are determined not to go the route of John Kennedy and Arthur Goldberg. The new administration plans to be neutral even it it hurts -- and the three-week-old dockers' strike which is strangling Puerto Rico and the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts while the Great Lakes are freezing over, is hurting badly -- right across the nation and around the world.

A striking dockwallopers' strike always hurts. During the 1962 crisis, John Kennedy returned to Palm Beach from a conference with the British prime minister and telephoned Teddy Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA). Gleason, glistening, rushed from the shower.

The President asked him to call off the strike. As one fighitng Irishman to another, Gleason said he would if he could, but he couldn't. John Kennedy's voice quivered and cut away. Gleason quivered and had to be bedded down ill for two days.

That 34-day strike cost the nation some $2 billion. The dockers went out again in 1965. Again the call came. Again the strike spurted. This time costs skyrocketed to some $67 million a day -- or about $3 billion to the national economy.

By 1968, President Johnson, laready a sadder man, was wiser. He called in the prophetlike mediator, Dave Cole, long an adviser to presidents. Mr. Cole was weary of the labor-industrial jungle. But then, in effect, the President said to him:

In a two-coast waterfront strike now, the most serious question is: what happens when foreign commerce stand still? How much worse does it get? How much will it undermine the American dollar? What will happen to the world money market if this crisis lasts? This can have a chain reaction on the British pound and the franc, as well as on the dollar. This could be disastrous.

Then Lyndon Johnson told Mr. Cole to do his mightiest to avert a crippling waterfront stirke, or to wash it up by January 20.

Mr. Cole had been in just such a crisis once. The steelworkers had struck the American Locomotive works at Dunkirk, N.Y. This installation was the only producer of the nickel-lined pipe needed by the Savannah, Ga., hydrogen bomb plant. Then too, the presidency was in limbo.

Harry Truman was about to leave. Dwight Eisenhower and his young vice president, Richard Nixon, were about to take over. Mr. Cole called in the labor and management chiefs and ended the strike.

But dockers are a different breed. They're caught up in a rapidly automating industry and their hand book, like the buggy whip, soon will disappear.

So it does not seem that even Mr. Cole's talents and soft cajoling can settle this strike before the inauguaration. What then?

Truly, aside from war and peace, this becomes Ricahrd Nixon's first major crisis.

Already there are 1,000 unloaded freight cars bogging down the rail yards here. Thousands of other freight carriers are immobilized all the way from Boston to New Orleans. Tens of thousands of trucks are being idled. With sugar refineries in the lead, many plants are 'going down." The dock waterfront is the bottleneck of America-- the jugular.

Teddy Gleason and his terse colleagues, each from old fighting stock -- Executive Vice President Johnny Bowers and Vice President Tony Scotto -- are out front. So are the shippers. For all of them there seems no retreat. This is the contract which will mold the industry for generations.

What will the new President Nixon and his labor minister do with their explosive inheritance? Their policy is to be neutral. Let the parties work it out or fight it out. But what of the dollar? What of layoffs? What of permanently lost foreign trade?

And if the new President asks the Congress for a special compulsory law (how can he not, since this strike already has been judged a threat to the safety and welfare of the nation?), will this whip up the controversy he has, for so long, planned to avoid?

And if he does go to the Hill, will not the new Senate whip, Sen. Edward Kennedy, second ranking man on the Senate labor committee, fight him? Of course he will.

And so, as in times of old, it comes down to high noon for the dockwallopers' vetetran, Teddy Gleason, and the President of the U.S.

Mr. Nixon's first crisis is a tough one.

Pants for Parties

NEW YORK (AP)—Women attending the inaugural balls honoring President-elect Nixon will be admitted in pant suits and men can wear black tie, although white tie is recommended.

They're accepted these days, aren't they," Mark Evans, one of the ball's cochairmen, asked a group of fashion writers Thursday at the Hotel Pierre, Nixon's headquarters.

As the women chorused their affirmation, Evans said, "If you say so. . . Yes, women will be admitted in their formal drawers."

Evans and Mrs. Leslie C. Arends, wife of the Illinois congressman, also said that after much deliberation the chairmen had decided white tie was preferrable for the inaugural ball but that black tie would be optional.

Evans, Mrs. Arends, and another co-chairan, presented Mrs. Nixon with examples of the favors to be given to inaugural ball guests.

Guests sitting in $1,000 boxes will receive a red, white and blue 21-inch scarves emblazoned with the Nixon inaugural theme, "Forward Together."

In addition, the women will be given a gold filled bracelet with dangling square medallions of the inaugural seal and male guests will receive cuff links engraved with the seal.

State Fair Opens Opera

ST. LOUIS, MO. - The world stage premiere of the Rodgers and Hammerstein film musical success "State Fair" will officially open the fifty-first season of the St. Louis Municipal Opera in June, 1969, it was announced today by Edwin R. Culver III, President of the Municipal Theatre Association.

"We have scored a great achievement in obtaining the rights to stage 'State Fair,'" Culver said. "It was not an overnight accomplishment. We've been conferring and negotiating on legal technicalities with all parties concerned for more than a year and a half. We are much indebted to Richard Rodgers and the sons of the late Oscar Hammerstein II, William and James, as well as their attorney, Howard Reinheimer, for their zealous and continual efforts in securing the approval from the film producers and the estate of Phil Stong, from whose novel the film was adapted. We would have been sorely disappointed had our desire not ben finally brought to fruition."

"The story of 'State Fair' will truly lend itself to glorious spectacle and magnitude on the giant stage of the Municipal Theatre. Rodgers and William and James Hammerstein will personally assist productions director, Glenn Jordan, in the staging of the musical play and in the casting of the leading roles," Culver added.

Three different movie versions of "State Fair" have been produced. The first, in 1932, was a non-musical drama, starring the late Will Rogers. The first of the two musical versions, with Richard Rodgers writing the music and Hammerstein the lyrics, as well as helping adapt the screenplay from the novel, was in 1945, and the principal parts were sung by Dick Haymes and Jeanne Crain.

The 1945 version of the film included such currently popular Rodgers and Hammerstein songs as "It Might As Well Be Spring," "Our State Fair," "That's For Me," and "It's A Grand Night For Singing."

The latest and most successful musical revision was produced in 1962, featuring Pat Boone, Bobby Darrin, Pamela Tiffin, Ann-Margaret, Tom Ewell, and Alice Faye.

The story tells of the excitement, romance, heartache and joy surrounding the activities of a family during a state fair, all adding up to rollicking comedy and touching sincerity for the audience.

Experts Offer Advice

By MARY SCHURZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Close your eyes a little." That's the secret of a successful marriage according to one couple who ought to know—they've been wed for half a century.

It's also good advice for a number of young persons—including the daughter of comedian Bob Hope—who were married this weekend.

The experts were Mr. and Mrs. James J. Gibney of New York who were among 333 couples, all of whom married in 1919, at a mass celebration Sunday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

After repeating the vows they first exchanged 50 years ago, the Gibneys, who have four children, 15 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, shared some of thir marital philosophy.

"You can't have your own way. One has to give in," said Mrs. Gibeny when asked what she has learned in 50 years.

"Keep out of her way while she's doing the housework," said Gibney in reply to the same question.

"That means," said Mrs. Gibney, "he doesn't help."

"And," said Gibney, "I have learned to get home for meals on time. She gets very mad if I'm late."

New York wasn't the only place for remembering past romance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vaught of Bedford, Ind., observed their golden wedding anniversary Saturday by taking the elevator to the top of the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument in midtown Indianapolis — the spot where they were married.

On Jan. ll, 1919, Vaught, a World War I veteran, was still wearing his Marine uniform and the minister who married the young couple said there wasn't a better place for a man in uniform to wed.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Graves Pate of Nashville, Tenn., marked their anniversary with a train trip. For their honeymoon 50 years ago, they went to New Orleans and San Diego by rail. This year, they did the same thing.

This was a weekend also for young love as several wellknown persons were married Saturday or announced engagements.

Chris Noel, the leggy disk jockey who visited Vietnam as the U. S. answer to Hanoi Hanna, married Capt. Ty Herrington, a Green Beret officer who proposed in a helicopter. Chris, who has a twice-weekly show on Armed Forces Radio, is known in Vietnam for her miniskirt. But she wore a long white gown for her wedding in Palm Beach, Fla.

Another Vietnam "veteran" figured prominently in a wedding —as the father of the bride. Comedian Bob Hope, who has entertained the troops overseas for many years, escorted his daughter Linda, 28, down the aisle in North Hollywood as she was married to Nathaniel G. Lande, 34, a movie director.

A soldier from Vietnam whose gaily decorated love letters drew the attention of postal employes was married in Saddle Brook, N.J. Among the guests were several clerks. They represented postal employes who became concerned when the letters stopped coming and wrote to Marianne. They learned Gordon stopped writing when he was ordered home.

A hospital chapel was the setting for the wedding of Pueblo crewman Edward Russell and Sharon McCartney. Russell, who was supposed to marry Sharon Oct. 12, but who had to postpone the wedding because of his captivity in North Korea, is being kept in the U.S. Naval Hospital at San Diego for observation along with his fellow crewmen.

And a wedding to come — that of Jane Cameron, daughter of U.S. Sen. and Mrs. Philip A. Hart, to Peter S. Conserva of Devon, Pa. The daughter of the Michigan Democrat is a nursing student at Villanova. Conserva teaches in Philadelphia. The Harts announced the engagement and said an August wedding was planned.

Howard Cathy Turns Five

Mrs. Herbert Cathy, 819 Moore, gave her son, Howard George a birthday party at their home. Mrs. Lee Wilson assisted at the party.

Attending Howard's fifth birthday party were Chuch Hampton, Rob Porter, Tracy Jeffords, Frank Parrish, Brian Wilson, Jill Meyer, Vickie Throgmorten, Kim Shuffit, Keith Mothershead, Jimmy Cox, Phillip Dupont, Vincent Dupont, Kelly Wilson, and Butch Wilson.

Refreshments were served and games were played.

"AFL Here to Stay" Cracks Joe the Lip

By STRATTON L. DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI AP - Joe Namath had just led his New York Jets to a stunning 16-7 victory over the Baltimore Colts. He obviously was elated.

He also was thirsty, dirty, tired-and bitter.

"Are you one of those NFL writers?" he asked each reporter who approached him in the Jets dressing room. "Well, listen," he would say with a scowl, "AFL is here to stay and you'd better believe it. I guarantee."

Stripped to his football pants and socks, Namath slouched on a bench and the well wishers and writers strained to get near him. It was at least 100 degrees in the crowded Jets dressing room and he was soaked with perspiration. His long black mane hung down in damp ringlets.

"Nobody believed we would win," he kept saying. "Nobody but the New York fans gave us a chance. Where were you guys?"

At least 50 reporters were ringed around him scribbling down every word. "Hey, somebody get me another Pepsi," he yelled. As if by magic, a full cup was pressed into his hands and four others were set down beside him.

"Hey brother, watch it,' he said to a photographer whose foot was dangerously close to the soft drink supply.

"I want everybody to take notice," he said. "There's no champagne in the dressing room of the new world champions."

After about 20 minutes of questions and congratulations, a little man wearing a Super Bowl straw hat pushed through and tapped Joe on the arm, almost timidly.

"Hey, Dad," he yelled "where'd you get that hat?" Then they hugged each other.

"What are you shaking about?" John Namath asked his famous son. "I'm a little weak right now Dad,' was the reply.

Joe's mother was not at the game. "She never comes," he said. "Her nerves won't stand it, she swells up like a baloon."

After an hour, Joe made his way to the training table and began cutting away the tape on his feet and knees. The puple scars on his knees stood out in contrast against the white flesh.

They were the only signs of wear on the 25-year-old former Alabama star who made football history when he signed a $400,000 contract wih the Jets four years ago.

"Do you feel sorry for Morrall?" he was asked.

"Better him than me," replied Joe. "Do you think anyone would be crying for me now if the Colts had won? Hah:"

Joe turned and tossed a wad of tape at a Jets trainer. It missed by a foot. ' Excuse me," he said, "I overthrew."

"He's the cock of the walk now," whispered one writer. "Yes," said another, "he's on top. There's nobody like him."

Joe was angered when somebody asked him if the Super Bowl had been his greatest game.

"You must be one of them NFL writers," he sneered. "Just because we beat an NFL team doesn't mean it was out best game.

"I was confident we would win....we all were," he said "Confidence is one thing another confidence is something else. If we didn't have confidence we shouldn't have been here."

Joe's outspoken victory predictions made headlines before the game and many writers forecast he would pay for his remarks when the Colts' defensive line got a shot at him But they never really got to him.

"I got good protection," he said. "It was a team effort. Everybody was great."

Asked how the Colts compare with AFL teams, Namath said: "It's hard to say. On any given day one of our better teams could whip one of their better teams and vice versa.

Hornets Fly By Hawks

ADVANCE Home spectators saw their team down the Kelly Hawks Saturday night as the Hornets out-pointed their opponents 77-64. Some restitution was offered for the Hawks, however, as Kelly defeated Advance in the junior varsity battle, 43-37.

Hornets kept the lead throughout the remaining half of play and outscored the Hawks 39-33.

There were a number of fouls received during the game with three Kelly players leaving the game due to these infractions.

Hornets had three players in double figures with Tony Jenkins leading his mates with 33. He was followed by Perry Daniels with 22, and Ford Morgan with 17.

Downed Hawks were led by Danny Dempster with 20, Joe Davis with 14, Robert Schiwitz with 12, and Larry Ulmer with 11.

Charleston Next Match For Bulldogs

Sikeston's Bulldogs hope to keep their winning streak with them as they go against the Charleston BlueJays on the opponents court Friday.

Sikeston will be shooting for its eighth win of the season and add another win to their SEMO conference slate which stands at 1-0 presently after Saturday's win at Kennett.

Sikeston is well on its way to an outstanding season as they have thus far suffered only one defeat in eight roundball outings. This loss came at the hands of undefeated Oran during the Bloomfield Christmas Tournament.

Sikeston should be well-rested for the duel, since this will their only game of the week.

Charleston won a non-conference game against Fulton County in basketball competition last Friday.

Probable varsity starters for Sikeston will be Fred Towns, Dennis Snelling, Aurthur Jackson, Bruce Farris, and Larry Lawrence. The junior varsity squad is expected go with Hunt, Tucker, King, McCauly, and Jones.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why is the ordinary dinner jacket called a "tuxedo"?

A—The name is said to have originated with a country club at Tuxedo Park, N.Y., where this type of dinner jacket was first worn.

Q—What is meant by the expression, "His speech was graced with attic salt"?

A—The phrase is used to mean a certain wit or vigor of style in writing, in reference to the superior quality anciently attributed to Athenian works. The Roman style was heavier, less spirited.

GOOD BYE? One might get that impression, but both were battling for the rebound in Friday night's basketball game at Matthews between the Pirates and undefeated Oran Eagles. Shown are Don Eavns (42) of Oran and Clarence Brooks of Matthews. Oran retained its undefeated status, beating the Pirates 82-60 for its 17th straight win.

Bulldogs Take Pair From Indians

KENNETT Bulldog basketballers increased their proud record to 7-1 Saturday night as they defeated the Kennett Indians 62-55 and added it's first SEMO conference win while the junior varsity increased it's record to 3-1 as they outscored their opponents 57-47.

"Sikeston played a good game all around and especially showed their talents on defense," commented Coach N. P. McDaniel.

Sikeston made its biggest stride of the battle in the second quarter ad they outscored the Indians 20-13. Kennett put up its most successful fight in the final period of play as it outtallied Sikeston 16-12.

Fred Towns, the usual high-point man for the Bulldogs came up with 14 points and was outscored by junior Larry Lawrence who netted 18 - the high for the night.

Dennis Snelling and Arthur Jackson were also in double figures for Bulldogs, adding 14 and 11 points respecitvely. The other member of the Bulldog starting quintet, Bruce Farris - came through with five points.

Kennett's Ed McKinney led his fellow mates in their drive for victory with 15 points. Ed was also the leading rebounder for the Indians.

McKinney was followed in the scoring department by Randy Fingers with 14 and Larry Robinson with 10 points.

In the junior varsity duel, Sikeston got off to an even start with the Indians as both teams came up with 16 points in the first quarter. The Bulldogs led in the remaining quarters of action with their biggest margin being set in the second as they out pointed their competitors 13-7.

Sikeston had two players in double figures: Jim King put 13 through the goal and Gerrod Hunt came up with 11. King was the leading rebounder for Sikeston.

Gilmer was the high point player for the Indians as he put the pressure on the Bulldogs with 15. He was followed by the Indians only other double figure man, Sullinger, who tallied 10.

Sikeston's next game is scheduled for Friday as they travel to Charleston to meet the Bluejays.

Harris Given Good Shot at Party Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—Selection of Fred Harris as Democratic national chairman—a prospect enhanced by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's weekend endorsement—would provide a broader national stage for an Oklahoma senator with star quality.

The folksy, good-looking Harris, who parts his dark hair down the middle, is a solid member of the Senate Establishment while maintaining firm ties among liberals. He already has stirred talk as a possible "sleeper" candidate for the 1972 presidential nomination.

Humphrey made official Saturday his suspected preference for Harris to succeed Lawrence F. O'Brien when the Democratic National Committee meets Tuesday. As titular head of the party, Humphrey's choice is almost certain to be accepted.

"I hope he will have your support," the vice president told the committee in a telegram.

"I appreciate the vice president's recommendation," said Harris in a statement. "I am grateful for the enthusiastic support of the national committee members and prominent Democrats from throughout the country."

While the 38-year-old senator, who worked his way from a farm boy to a Phi Beta Kappa key, indicated he had not made a final decision, one of his aides left little doubt that he would accept. "Chances are good that he is not going to say no if the committee wants him" the aide said.

Among other things, the chairman's job offers a chance to share credit with Humphrey for bringing about party reforms that the vice president says are needed to regain the White House.

Humphrey's telegram of endorsement followed separate meetings he held Thursday with Harris and former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina.

Sanford announced his withdrawal over the weekend and was replaced in dark horse speculation by New Jersey Gov. Richard Hughes.

After four years of doing his homework and earning membership in the Senate Club by not rocking the boat, Harris got some national statute last year when he was co-chairman of the Humphrey campaign along with Minnesota Sen. Walter Mondale.

His joining the Humphrey camp reportedly miffed the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to whom Harris had been close.

Harris, described by aides as "high strung" and who has been known to put away more than two packs of cigarettes a day, came to the Senate in 1964.

He whipped the well-known football coach, Bud Wilkinson, for the seat vacated by the death of Robert S. Kerr and won election to a full term in 1967.

A favorite game in Washington in the months after any general election is to speculate on winners or others who distinguish themselves in the campaign as possible presidential timber.

A dual role as senator and party spokesman combined with scrappiness and a good television style could put the name Harris right up there along with Kennedy, Muskie, Humphrey and McCarthy when the guessing begins in earnest.

New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell made just such a point in a television interview Sunday when he called Harris a "sleeper" possibility for 1972.

"He's smart," said Powell. 'He's young."

There's another point that makes Harris an attractive choice for the chairmanship.

Although O'Brien suggested a fulltime committee chairman might be best for the party, selection of a senator would help Democratic congressional leaders keep control of shaping opposition policy while the GOP holds the White House.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said last week he wants to keep the policy initiative in Congress and is opposed to revival of the liberal advisory group that sprung up during the Eisenhower years. That group was often at odds with the Democratic congressional leadership.

Symington Files For Senate Seat

JEFFERSON CITY, MO. – U. S. Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) is today filing at 2:30 p.m. for reelection to the United States Senate.

Symington said: "I believe my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the Executive and Legislative branches of our Government, have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America."

"Based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve those two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again the citizens of Missouri give me their confidence and support," he continued.

Symington said he is "very grateful for the confidence the people of Missouri have given me over the past sixteen years in allowing me to represent them in the Senate, and I have done my best to honor that trust."

He said, "We Americans face problems unprecedented in our history, in the domestic as well as the international field. It is clear that upon our ability to cope with those problems rests the future security and well-being of our nation."

Symington had stated publicly last year that he would be a candidate for reelection in 1970. He was here today to attend Inauguration ceremonies.

Both as a businessman in Missouri and since his election to the Senate, Symington has been a strong supporter of industrial development throughout Missouri. He has continually emphasized and worked for water resource and scientific research projects of vital importance to Missouri's economy.

In the Senate, for many years he has been the only Senator of either party who serves on both the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees. He also serves on the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee and the Joint Economic Committee. Last year he was appointed as one of two Congressional representatives on the U. S. delegation at the United Nations.

Before entering government service, Symington was President of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Company of St. Louis. He resigned that position in 1945 when he became full-time chairman of the Surplus Property Board.

He then served in numerous other key positions including Assistant Secretary of War for Air, the first Secretary of the Air Force, Chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

I am very grateful for the confidence the people of Missouri have given me over the past sixteen years in allowing me to represent them in the United States Senate; and I have done my best to honor that trust.

Today we Americans face problems unprecedented in our history, in the domestic as well as the international field; and it is clear that upon our ability to cope with those problems rests the future security and well-being of our nation.

I believe that my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the Executive and Legislative branches of our Government, have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America.

Accordingly, today I am filing for reelection to the United States Senate, and based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve those two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again you give me your confidence and support.

Probe Slated Into Attacks on Senile Patients

ST. LOUIS (AP)–The circuit attorney's office and the city health department plan to investigate a series of attacks on senile Chronic Hospital patients with a caustic solution and the deaths of three of the victims.

Five patients were doused with the caustic between Aug. 14 and Jan. 7. Two died subsequently, but authorities attributed their deaths to natural causes.

The fifth victim, John Fortner, 55, was attacked last Tuesday and died Friday. Mrs. Helen Taylor, city coroner, said Fortner suffered lung collapse and internal throat burns, apparently caused by some type of lye solution.

James A. Roche, first assistant circuit attorney, said city officials would be asked to explain why the episodes were not reported to police until after the fourth attack on Dec. 31.

Roche said if an inquiry suggests that more investigation is needed, the matter will be referred to a grand jury.

Dr. Earl Smith, city health commissioner, said he would order an investigation of all recent deaths at the city-owned institution for the care of the chronically ill.

"This is incredible," Dr. Smith said. "It's the most amazing thing I've ever heard of. God knows how many others have died."

Police guards were stationed at the hospital to prevent a recurrence.

There was no suggested motive for the attacks. Apparently all occurred on the late night shift when the fewest number of staff members were on duty.

Joseph Shank, the hospital administrator, said all the victims were senile to some degree and none could speak or cry out.

U.S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC)–Army Private First Class Nathaniel E. Green, 18, son of Mrs. Alberta Green, 106 Alabama St., Sikeston, Mo., was assigned to the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam, Dec. 18.

'Give Me' Now Slogan Of Two Many Citizens

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Too many people in this country have shortened Patrick Henry's famous expression "Give me liberty or give me death" to simply "Give me," a naturalized United States citizen who now teaches American history, said Thursday.

David Doctorian, who also teaches French in the Shelbina, Mo schools, urged more than 100 Southeast Missouri elementary school principals, meeting at Southeast Missouri State College, to return to the time when students "get the rewards as well as the punishment they deserve."

"Rules ought to be enforced at all costs,' Doctorian said. "If they are not enforced, it is better to do away with them."

Otherwise, said the speaker, students will not learn respect for rules or laws and will leave school feeling that society owes them something. He decried those who look for excuses or blame society for lawlessness.

Doctorian is a native of Beirut, Lebanon. He came to the United States in 1950, virtually penniless, and worked his way through college, eventually earning three degrees. He became a citizen in 1963, a day he said he remembers "better than my birthday."

Adressing the area administrators on the "fourth R--responsibility," he said, "Without this, the other three (reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic) will not help us much in this country."

He conceded that "we do have injustices, inequalities, and problems." He added, "But what country does not?"

Doctorian also asked, "Should a small minority determine the future of a nation which is supposed to be democracy and a republic."

He said he feared this is what will happen unless educators begin now to do a better job of teaching love for country and duty toward it.

He criticized the news media for sometimes misrepresenting the strength of the various militant organizations.

The speaker was introduced by Vencil Wilson Poplar Bluff, president ofthe Southeast Missouri Department of Elementary School Principals.

Dr. David Strand, associate dean of Southeast Missouri State, welcomed the group to the campus and told them the college hopes to open bids on a new $2,292,000 education building "in a month or two."

Future of Reanimation Played Up

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Reanimation, the bringing back to life of someone who under present criteria might be presumed dead, has a big future in medicine, says a Soviet expert.

V. A. Negovsky, director of the Moscow Academy of Sciences' Reanimation Institute, said in an interview Sunday, "The struggle against death is an old aspiration among men, particularly the Russians."

The Soviet scientist, here to attend the World Congress on Death and Reanimation, said the the study of reanimation has hurdled many obstacles. He added: "Reanimation will be the pre- eminent branch of medicine in the future."

Negovsky said that in the cases of sudden death, life is not completely lost until the brain stops functioning.

"We know well that the arrest of circulation and respiration signify a cessation of life, but we also know that not all organs and not all tissues die in the same moment,' he added.

"The nervous system in particular has a brief afterlife which, until a few years ago, was calculated at four minutes, but which is certainly more."

This bodily system, he said, could sometimes live up to half an hour after other vital functions had halted. He indicated that in some cases this half hour could make the difference between a corpse and a reanimated person.

"Circulation and respiration can be actively maintained through the use of artificial hearts and lungs," said Negovsky.

He recommended that doctors working on reanimation concentrate on heart cases, because heart disease is such a frequent cause of sudden deaths.

In an address to the congress Sunday, Dr. I. E. Ganelina, from the Pavlov Institute in Leningrad, said her work showed that good weather helped reanimate the virtually dead. Failures in attempts to reanimate, she added, tripled during days of gloomy weather compared with results on pleasant days.

Dr. V. Schrire of South Africa, director of the cardiac clinic at Cape Town's Groote Schuur hospital—site of the first human heart transplants—stated that most sudden deaths of internal causes occur at night. And most of these, he said, occur "precisely between midnight and 2 a.m.'

Ann Landers

Pantsuit Upsets Suitor

Dear Ann Landers: The other evening I went to pick up my girl to take her to dinner. When she answered the door I said, "Hi, Harold." I thought it was her brother.

June had on one of those pantsuits. With her short haircut and a button-down collar she looked just like a guy. I told her I didn't like the way she looked and, furthermore, I was afraid they wouldn't let us into the Ritz Hotel dining room dressed that way. She gave me a black look and said, "I'll change but I think you are being very provincial." Her lower lip stuck out all evening and we had a rotten time.

Will you please tell me if I was wrong to say anything? I told June when we said good night that if I wanted to date somebody in trousers there are two guys in the office who have hinted they'd like to go out with me. She didn't care much for that remark.

I love June and don't want to have any trouble with her. Please tell me if you think a man has the right to express his views on how his girl looks? — CHILLED CHUCK

Dear Chuck: I do, indeed. Pantsuits are in vogue, and some women look smashing in them. If, however, a boyfriend or a husband prefers that the light of his life wear a skirt when she goes with him, his wishes should be respected.

Dear Ann Landers: Please don't think I am a selfish, possessive mother. Nothing could be further from the truth. The problem is the other set of in-laws.

My husband and I would enjoy being with our daughter and her husband for an occasional evening without the other in-laws monopolizing the conversation with 'their plans, trips, projects.'

Please understand, Ann, they are fine folks, but they are overwhelming. We can't get a word in edgewise. Whenever my husband and I return from an evening with the four of them we feel we could just as well have stayed at home.

What do you suggest? — MAINE DILEMMA

Dear Dil: Be honest with your daughter. Tell her you would prefer not to be part of a quartet, even if this means seeing her less often. In my opinion, your complaint is a valid one and you should speak up.

Dear Ann: Our favorite niece announced her engagement five months ago. We were all thrilled. The young man comes from a fine family and is in his senior year at Brown. The date was set for January 26. Several parties were given and gifts sent.

Yesterday we received a cryptic three-line note from the bride's mother. The wedding is off. No reason. Just "off." We feel she owes us an explanation. After all, we aren't strangers. Do you agree? — INSULTED

Dear In: No. The reasons are nobody's business. If you are a real friend you will spare them additional anxiety and ask no questions.

Ann Landers' new book, "Truth Is Stranger...," is a collection of her best columns over the past 13 years, plus scintillating and common sense essays especially produced for this book. Available at all bookstores for $4.95.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

War Souvenirs Displayed At Farmers Supply Hardware

50 years ago
January 13, 1919

Mrs. Roy Clodfelter was called to Essex Sunday last by the illness of her sister, Mrs. Stella Emory, who is suffering an attack of influenza.

The Farmers Supply Hardware has a very interesting array of souvenirs captured by an American soldier from German soldiers, on display in their window. The articles, which include a German helmet, a gas mask, a cap worn by a member of the Prussian Guards, the finest troops in the German Army, and a paper knife made from U.S. six inch cannon shells, were captured by Cpl. Samuel Earl Hicks, of Memphis, Tenn., a member of Battery B. 115th Field Artillery, and now with the Army of Occupation in Germany. The souvenirs were loaned to D.H. White of White-Dooroh Wholesale Grocery Co. here, by a young lady friend of Cpl. Hicks.

The basketball team of Sikeston went to Caruthersville last Friday for a game with the local high school team. Sikeston won the game with a score of 25 to 13, after giving a very satisfactory performance of good playing. On Saturday night the team was scheduled to play Portageville in that city, and came off losers by a score of 21-13.

A fire which originated behind the kitchen stove in the Joe Meiderhoff house on Wilson street Thursday night, burned the roof of the dwelling and damaged the house and furnishings to the extent of about $1,000.

Elisha Johnson, for 32 years a farmer on the Haywood farm, two miles north of Sikeston, succumbed Sunday evening from heart trouble, at the age of 59 years and 19 days.

Louis Watkins remembered the editor's family with a generous helping of country sausage.

In a round about way we learn that we are to have another daughter-in-law. We now have two that we are very proud of and will welcome the third with all the sincerity that we possess. That will leave us two boys that give promise of making worthy husbands for some girls. We think of these daughter-in-law as we do our own girls, and would protect and divide our crusts with them to the last. Pardon us again for saying how happy it makes us in our declining days to look upon this big family of children who are such an honor to us.

Mrs. Nora Dudley of Sikeston received word late yesterday that the wife of her brother-in-law, Mrs. Myrtle Dudley of Iuka, Miss., died at her home there.

Dr. Ralph Pinyon, about 60, brother-in-law of William Huters, superintendent of the International Shoe Factory here, died at his home in Caruthersville last night of a heart attack.

The bodies of two former Sikeston servicemen are among the 16 being returned to Southeast Missouri from the Pacific area aboard the Army Transport, Sergeant Jack J. Pendleton, according to an announcement of the Department of the Army. They are: T/5 James R. Hailey of 705 Gladys and Pvt. William Spencer whose next of kin is listed as Ora L. Hobson, general delivery, Sikeston.

If You Were the Judge

Soliciting Former Clients Arouses Wrath of Grapes

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Mr. Grapes had a very successful business. He also had a very enterprising young employee named Jerry. And, while Mr. Grapes kept both feet on his desk, enjoying his success, Jerry kept both feet on the ground.

The result? Jerry left his employ one day and set himself up in his own business in direct competition with his erstwhile employer. It wasn't until he actively began to solicit his former employer's customers, however, that Jerry aroused the wrath of Grapes. Furious, Mr. Grapes raced to court and demanded that Jerry be ordered to stop stealing his customers.

"The boy's an ingrate," he complained to a judge. "After I taught him everything he knows about the business, he has the nerve to try to put me out of business."

"Free completion ," was Jerry's answer. "That's the name of the game. As a businessman, I've got every right to life, liberty and the pursuit of customers, anyone's!"

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order Jerry to stop putting the squeeze on Mr. Grapes by soliciting the latter's customers?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that as a general principal an employee, upon leaving his job, may solicit his former employer's customers unless their names were given to him in confidence or his expired contract of employment prohibits it.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

God so loved the world that he gave his only Son. (John 3:16, RSV)

PRAYER: Dear Lord, Thou dost bless us with many gifts. Teach us to be mindful of them as coming from Thee and to express our gratitude in our prayers and by deeds of love. In the spirit of Jesus we pray. Amen.

Seven-Mile Lake at Wolf Island

CHARLESTON - Jim Wallace of Charleston, president of the Mississippi County Recreation Association, has announced a cooperative venture by several agencies that will greatly improve fishing conditions in Wolf Island Chute within the next year or two.

He reports that a representative of the Kentucky Highway Department, residents and landowners on Wolf Island and members of the Recreation Association met with the Mississippi County Court on DEc. 30 to discuss plans for a dam and roadway across Wolf Island Chute and a tentative agreement was reached before the meeting adjounred.

The action was apparently initiated by the Kentucky Highway Department at the request of people who live and farm on Wolf Island, which is in Kentucky, for a better road access to the island. At present the only road access is at the north end of the island where an open concrete "low water bridge" crosses the chute. This crossing is low and is covered with water every year.

The proposal for a new entrance consists of the construction of a new earth fill dam across the Wolf Island Chute about two miles south and one mile east of the Wolf Island post office. This road is laready graveled from Route 77 almost to the levee and might be called and extension of "Perryman Lane" and runs along the south side of the Ringo Farms. The proposed land fill would be about 200 feet long and would be surfaced with gravel and connected to exisiting roads on both sides of the Chute. It would be protected from washing by broken concrete blocks and road building debris.

It would be at an elevation high enough that it would require a river stage of about 45 feet at Cairo to cover it. A large cluvert will allow rain water entering the chute to escape.

This bonus for local fishermen would impound all water in the chute from the dam northward to the mouth ... a distance of about seven miles. It would be refilled each time the river entered the north end of the chute. It is estimated that at many points the water would be as much as 20 feet deep, even in the summer months.

Cost of the bill is estimated at approximately $5,000 which will be borne one-half by the Kentucky Highway Department, and the balance by Missouri interests. The Mississippi County Court will participate in the road building expense, along with local landowners and fishermen.

It is hoped that the work will be completed this summer.

Russian Post

Russia once established a post on the coast of California. In 1812, a group of Russian fur traders established Fort Ross, less than 100 miles north of San Francisco, but they sold their land in 1841 and left the country.

Complaint On Club Adjusted

The Missouri Commission on Human Rights has satisfactorily adjusted a complaint by nine negroes against Sands Lounge, 1129 Malone, Sikeston.

Commission Executive Director Richard E. Risk announced that Field Representative Lewis L. Akenhead of Sikeston has adjusted the complaint, which had been fired under the State Public Accommodations Act.

The complainants had alleged that they entered the Sanus lounge April 24, 1968, went to a table and sat down. A waitress came to the table, and before anyone spoke to her, told the group they could buy beer only if they would take it outside and drink it elsewhere.

Investigation revealed probable cause to believe racial discrimination occurred and the waitress was carrying out the wishes of the owner in denying service because of race.

H.C. Linderman, owner of Sands Lounge, now has agreed to:

- Advice each of the complainants they may use the establishment on the same conditions as the general public.

--Display the state public accomodations poster.

--Admit and serve all patrons without discrimination or segregation because of race, color, creed, religion, national origin or ancestry.

--Instruct his employes to stop directing negro customers to drink their beverages off the premises.

Injured Pair Endures Half-Hour Car Ride With Dead Driver

PLAINVILLE, Kan. (AP)--A critically injured father and son endured a half-hour nightmare Saturday, lying helpless in a car running amuck in a Kansas wheat field with a dead driver at the wheel.

Harold Simons, 39, of Stockton, Kan., and his 5-year-old son, Paul, were injured in a traffic accident that killed his wife, Joan, and injured another son, Terry, 4, and the driver of the second car involved.

Ray Balderson, 65, former sheriff of Rush County, stopped to aid the victims of the accident. He volunteered to drive Simons and Paul to a Plainville hospital because the ambulance summoned could not accomodate all the injured.

Trooper Bob Norton of the Kansas Highway Patrol said Balderson suffered an apparent heart heart attack about two miles north of Plainville. Balderson's car crashed through a fence and churned a twisting course across the field, finally stopping about a mile from where it left the road.

Simons managed to get out of the car and crawl about 100 yards away to a farmhouse.

Norton said Simons was unable to speak well because of his injuries. He said Simons scratched on the side of the house and got no response. Finally he made it to the front door and knocked.

The occupants of the farmhouse called authorities and Simons and his son were finally taken to the hospital.

Norton said Balderson's berserk car plowed through the field "possibly as long as 30 minutes" before it finally came to a stop."

The traffic accident that set the stage for the bizarre incident happened on U.S. 183 about five miles north of Plainville.

Norton said a car driven by Paul Robles, 22, of Natoma, Kan ran off the highway and swerved back onto the road into the path of the Simons car.

All the injured were treated at Plainville and transferred to a Hays hospital. Simons and his sons were reported in critical condition and Robles in fair condition.

Hearnes First to Be Sworn in for Second 4-Year Term

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)--Democrat Warren E. Hearnes is the first Missouri governor to be sworn in for a second consecutive four--year term but the second governor to succeed himself.

In 1829, a Jeffersonian Democrat, John Miller, was sworn in for a full term after serving out the unexpired term of his predecessor, who died.

In modern times, the late Gov. Phil M. Donnelly served two four--year terms but they were not consecutive.

Hearnes Pledges Second Term To Work for Better Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY(AP)—Gov. Warren E. Hearnes was sworn in Monday for a second consecutive four—year term and laid his popularity on the line with a pledge to work for a better Missouri, no matter what the cost.

The 45—year—old Democrat thus became the first governor in Missouri history to start a second straight full term. In his first term he pushed through the constitutional amendment which permitted him to run and win a second time.

Hearnes rode a 375,000—vote majority into his second term and saw his victory as a delegation of authority by the people.

"I know what the task means," he said solemnly. "I realize the full responsibility which it involves.

"I begin this term with absolutely no pledge of any kind to prevent me from serving the people of this state with singleness of purpose.

"I would not be honest with you or myself if I did not say that I would enjoy leaving office four years from now in the good graces of my fellow citizens. However, I believe it is a grave mistake for a leader of a state or nation to make popularity his overriding goal.

"I pray God that I may be given the wisdom and prudence to do my duty."Looking back on his first term, Hearnes said the two legislative sessions "achieved a record of performance unmatched in our state's history and, perhaps, unequaled in any other state of the union."

The young governor, a former legislator, scored better than 90 per cent on his legislative proposals in his first term but expects heavy going in the current session.

Now, he said, "the question we face is whether we shall be satisfied to keep pace or whether we want to move sharply ahead."

Compared with many states, he said Missouri might be able to rest on its laurels for a while, but that would be to ignore the challenge to become even better.

Then, in an indirect reference to his proposals for needed tax increases, he said:

"If we had no roads, no schools, no economy or decency in government, or even if we were distinctly inadequate in any given area, Missourians would respond to remedy the situation quickly—no matter what the cost. But even when these deficiencies are not readily seen, it is only a great people who can envision a better way and respond to attain it.

"To do and to be better is a goal few achieve. To do it, we are required to make sacrifices —not in the sense of shedding our blood or the giving of our lives or the lives of those we love, but sacrifice in the sense of giving of a part of those material things which we enjoy in abundance.

"A great people will sacrifice part of that with which they have been blessed in order that their children might be better educated; their less fortunate, more fortunate; their health, better health; their state, a better state.

"I believe this state has awakened to the needs of education, highways, health, welfare, and the many other facets of government that require additional monies.

"It requires self restraint not to attempt too much—and yet it would be foolish and faint—hearted to attempt too little."

The governor said he could not do the job alone.

"I will need the continuing wisdom of the General Assembly," he said, "and a critical dialogue founded upon cooperation, The General Assembly, in turn, will need from the people of our state a commitment of mutual trust, a trust that is both clear and far sighted,

"Our future in years, even in decades, is not beyond our control. the work of our hands, matched with reason and principle, will determine that future."

Cong Attack Destroys 15 Copters

SAIGON (AP)—The Viet Cong blasted their way into the biggest U.S. airfield in the Mekong Delta early today and blew up 15 helicopters worth an estimated $5 million before they were repelled by base defenders.

Another six helicopters were reported damaged in a mortar barrage at the headquarters of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division 40 miles away. One officer called the attacks an "oozing beginning" of the long-awaited enemy offensive in the 14,250 square mile delta south of Saigon.

The Viet Cong attack on Can Tho, 80 miles south of the capital, was the first major ground probe against an allied airfield in several weeks. It hit the headquarters of the U.S. Army's 164th Aviation Group, the nerve center for military operations in the Mekong Delta in the region's biggest city.

Enemy sappers broke through the airfield's defenses under cover of a heavy mortar, rocket and machine-gun barrage that pinned down the Americans while the Viet Cong attached explosives to the helicopters. A barracks area west of the airfield was attacked simultaneously.

Field reports said five cargo and troop-carrying Chinooks and 10 smaller helicopter gunships were destroyed or damaged. U. S. casualties were eight killed and 10 wounded.

The U. S. Command said: "The enemy soldiers were quickly repelled by airfield security personnel, supported by U.S. Army helicopter gunships and a U.S. Air Force Dragon ship," a fixed-wing aircraft equipped with rapid-firing Gatling guns. A spokesman said the American retaliatory fire killed four Viet Cong.

Forty miles north of Can Tho, Viet Cong gunners slammed about 10 mortar rounds into the 9th Division headquarters at Dong Tam. Field reports said there were no casualties but six helicopters were damaged, including the command chopper of Maj. Gen. Julian Ewell, the division commander.

Ten helicopters were damaged at Dong Tam in a similar shelling three days ago.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported three overnight shellings against two district towns and a provincial capital north and northwest of Saigon. A spokesman said two civilians and one policeman were killed and 19 persons were wounded, including 12 civilians, four soldiers and three policemen.

In other ground fighting near the Cambodian border, South Vietnamese rangers claimed killing 35 enemy soldiers 57 miles northwest of Saigon. Two rangers were killed and 22 wounded, including two American advisers.

In the air war, U. S. headquarters announced that a B52 strike 70 miles southwest of Saigon Sunday killed 20 Viet Cong and wiped out 162 enemy fortifications and 18 sampans.

The giant bombers mounted three more missions Sunday night, dropping more than 500 tons of explosives on enemy bases 60 miles north of Saigon.

Symington Files for Fourth Term

JEFFERSON CITY(AP)—Sen. Stuart Symington, St. Louis county Democrat, picked Missouri's inauguration day to file for a fourth term as United States senator.

In an effort to quell rumors that he might challenge Symington for the Democratic nomination in 1970, newly inaugurated Gov. Warren E. Hearnes arranged to accompany Symington to Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick's office.

Symington, now 67, was first elected to the senate in 1952, was re—elected in 1958 and again in 1964, the last time by a whopping 590,000—vote majority.

In the 1968 general election, his son, James W. Symington, was elected to represent the 2nd Congressional District of St. Louis county—the only father—son team in Congress.

Symington recently has advocated pressing ahead with Vietnamese peace negotiations, with or without the cooperation of the Saigon government. In a statement prepared for his filing he said:

"We Americans face problems unprecedented in our history in the domestic as well as the international field. It is clear that upon our ability to cope with these problems rests the future security and wellbeing of our nation."

Symington is the only senator serving on both the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

"I believe my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the executive and legislative branches of our government," he said, "have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America.

"Based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve these two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again the citizens of Missouri give me their confidence and support."

Symington was president of Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. in St. Louis until 1945, then entered government as chairman of the surplus property board.

Later he was administrator of the Surplus Property Administration, assistant secretary of war for air, the first secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board and administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

He resigned from the latter job in 1952 to run for the Senate.

Johnson to Urge Surtax Extension

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson will recommend continuation of the income surtax at 10 per cent in his State of the Union message Tuesday night, it was learned authoritatively today.

Johnson apparently received word from President-elect Nixon that he would go along with the tax surcharge extension.

It was not immediately clear for how long Johnson will urge extension of the tax, which would expire June 30 unless Congress acts to continue it.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said Sunday he thinks Nixon would go along with the tax as long as the Vietnam war continues with high expenditures.

The tax brings in about $13 billion a year and Johnson is said to have determined that he could not submit a balanced budget to Congress Wednesday unless the revenue from what has generally been regarded as a war tax is continued.

Johnson has decided to submit a balanced budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It would forecast a small surplus in revenues over expenditures.

Nixon is at liberty to revise this budget but its basic assumptions on revenue and expenditures could be changed only with great difficulty.

George Christian, White House news secretary, said at a briefing that submission of the budget Wednesday will be followed by an economic message Thursday.

In a nationally televised and broadcast personal appearance before a joint session Tuesday night, Johnson is expected to outline briefly his view of his administration's record and make specific recommendations for future actions. His message, still being written, is expected to be considerably shorter than previous similar messages.

Johnson scheduled a seris of meetings today before his expected late afternoon departure for New York City. There, he and Mrs. Johnson will be honored dinner gusts at a Plaza Hotel affair to be attended by about 400 persons. Many of the hosts are New York State Democrats.

Johnson started his final week in office today with the prospect that he may leave his successor a budget of some $196 billion to operate the government the next fiscal year

Although he can point to a record run of prosperity during his tenure, Johnson may feel impelled to warn against the rising wave of inflation that has pushed bank loan interest rates to a record high and is reflected in the soaring cost of living.

At home Johnson can point to his administration's programs to grapple with the problems of the breakdown of law and order, racial rioting, decaying cities, water and air pollution, and poverty.

Johnson is expected to review the nation's achievements in space exploration and to recommend full-scale continuance of that program.

Children Play Inauguration Ceremony Role

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Kids played a prominent part in Monday's inaugural ceremonies in Missouri.

Most of them got into the limelight at the noon swearing in ceremonies. The older ones plan to dress up in their finery for the inaugural ball.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' three daughters shared honors as they held the Bible while their father took the oath of office for the second time. They are Lynne, 19; Leigh, 16, and Julie B., 10.

Lisa Morris, 11, officiated with the Bible while her father, Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, was sworn in.

For Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick the Bible holding honors were performed by his two grandchildren, Larry Kirkpatrick, 10, and Dee Anne, 6. Treasurer William E. Robinson's only son, Thomas, a Lincoln University student, held the Bible for his father. For Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, the only Republican elective official, the Bible was held by two of his daughters, Eleanor, 8, and Mary, 5. The other two are still too young to participate—D. D., 16 months, and Jody, three months.

Inaugural Hoopla Prevails

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Missouri's stately Capitol looked down today on a new chapter in history—the inauguration of the first governor ever to win a second straight four-year term.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, 45year-old veteran of the legislative and political wars, was sworn in at high noon by Judge Lawrence Holman, chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court.

He was preceded in the oath taking by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, the first Republican to win state office since 1940, and the three other Democrats swept in on the Hearnes tide last November—Lt. Gov. William S. Morris, Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick and Treasurer William E. Robinson.

An estimated 14,000 or more persons jammed this little capital city for the all day hoopla—and they had a fine day for it, with thin, high clouds and the temperature near 40.

The governor, state officials and most of the governor's 1,030 honorary colonels paraded through downtown Jefferson City in a preliminary show. Eleven bands and many military units added to the color.

After watching the 50-minute parade from a reviewing stand on the river side of the capitol, the dignitaries moved to the south steps where temporary stands were erected beneath the towering statue of Thomas Jefferson.

The colonels and other visitors sat in thousands of folding chairs. A National Guard blower carried heat to the stands where the officials and their families were seated.

As the governor was sworn in, a 19-gun salute boomed and echoed between the Missouri River bluffs which once saw Lewis and Clark toil up the muddy river.

Missouri's two U.S. senators, Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton, greeted the crowd briefly. Symington planned to file for a fourth term later in the day.

In a short inaugural address the governor looked ahead to a finer Missouri and pleaded with the legislature and the citizenry to help him achieve it.

When the ceremonies before a joint outdoor session of the legislature were over, the honorary colonels were bused to the National Guard Armory for lunch. Their wives ate at Sellinger Center in the St. Peter's Catholic Church complex across the street from the Capitol.

The governor and Mrs. Hearnes entertained state officials and their families at a luncheon at the Executive Mansion, scene of a five-hour military reception Sunday.

Tonight a reception will be held in the executive offices for state officials, Supreme Court judges and commissioners and legislators and their wives.

One Injury On Area Highways

This was one of the best weekends in months concerning the number of accidents that occurred in southeast Missouri.

The Highway Patrol said Vickie Baylor, 16, Cape Girardeau, was slightly injured 5 a.m. Saturday when a 1955 Chevrolet in which she was riding failed to round a curve about 10 miles north of Cape Girardeau near Trail of Tears State Park.

Driver of the auto was James Price, 20, Jackson.

This was the only accident with injuries in district 10.

Grass Fire

Sikeston firemen answered an alarm 1:45 p.m. Sunday to extinguish a grass fire at 415 Illinois. No damage was reported.

Two Thefts Reported

Sikeston police had two thefts reported during the weekend.

Al Burrows, 868 West Malone, reported nine stereo tape recordings and a shotgun were stolen Sunday from his automobile. Value of the items is $69.

James Russell Terry, 221 Luther, reported a .22 caliber pistol was stolen Saturday night from his house.

East Prairie Youth Killed Accidentally

CHARLESTON -- Roy DeWayne Farmer, 12, East Prairie, was killed in a hunting accident at 3:15 p.m. Sunday about eight miles east of Charleston near the Mississippi River levee.

Authorities said the accident happened when the youth's brother, Van Allen Farmer, 14, was unloading his 16-guage shotgun. The gun discharged and the shot struck the boy in the chest.

Hunting with the youths were their father, Calvin Farmer, two cousins, Thomas and Bill Smotherman, and an uncle, James Smotherman. They had been rabbit hunting.

Young farmer was loaded into his uncle's automobile and died enroute to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

"Casey at the Bat," the legendary baseball poem, was first recited May 1, 1888, by DeWolf Hopper in a New York City theater.

Third Weekend Hijack Bid Foiled When Stewardess Slams Door in Gunman's Face

MIAMI (AP)—An attempted hijacking of a Delta Airlines jet en route to Miami from Detroit was foiled early today when a stewardess disregarded a passenger's shotgun and slammed the cabin door in his face, police said.

The attempt came hours after the victims of two weekend hijackings had returned from Cuba.

The Dade County sheriff's department said local and federal officers arrested Kenneth Earl McPeek, 31, of Orchard Lake, Mich., when the plane landed at Miami International Airport. His 3-year-old son was taken into protective custody.

Officers said they went to the airport after the plane's captain radioed the Miami airport that he had a man aboard with a shotgun.

The sheriff's department said McPeek told them he carried the shotgun aboard the plane in a duffel bag. The weapon was found under his seat, unassembled and again in the bag, the officers said.

Stewardess Lynne Sargeant of Miami Springs, Fla., told authorities she was accosted by a passenger who placed a shotgun in the pit of her stomach. The passenger told her to tell the captain he was going to Havana.

Instead, police said, Miss Sargeant slammed the door of the cockpit and locked it. The would-be hijacker apparently gave up the idea of a forced flight to Havana at that point, officers said.

Three times Sunday, airplanes swooped into Miami with victims of Saturday's two airline hijackings. The returning planes carried a band of laughing students, people bleary-eyed from loss of sleep and an airliner crew whose captor insisted on a radio message to "tell Fidel Red is coming."

A Convair jet of the Peruvian national airline—APSA—was 10 minutes out of Miami when a gun-brandishing man took over.

Co-pilot Eric Schrieber said the hijacker—whose Mexican passport identified him as Jesum Amaya—told the flight crew: "My life doesn't matter. Neither do the lives of you or the passengers. I want to go to Havana."

Schrieber added: "He didn't speak with a Mexican accent. He could have been anything."

Capt. George Wagner, 46, of Pompano Beach, Fla., turned the jet toward Havana. But a public address system failure kept him from informing his passengers. The plane carried 110 people, including about eighty 15 to 18-year-old Argentine students en route to this country in an exchange program.

"We saw the palm trees and thought it was Miami," Maria Eugenia Gonsebatt, 17, of Entre Rios, Argentina, said. "And then we saw the 'Welcome to Havana' sign.

Trude Holler, a 17-year-old Buenos Aires student bound for Long Beach, Calif., said, "I thought how awful. I thought Miami would be much nicer."

University of Havana students were bused to the airport to mingle with the Argentines.

"It was clear they were trying to propagandize us," said David Edward Kostzer. The 15-year-old from Tucoman, Argentina, will study at La Habra, Calif.

The Cuban and Argentine students traveled about Havana in buses then were driven to Varadero, a coastal city, to spend the night in a luxury hotel and await return to Miami aboard a chartered plane sent by the U. S. State Department.

A dozen hours after the Peruvian plane landed in Cuba a man with close-cropped red hair boarded a United Air Lines jet at Jacksonville, Fla. Shortly after it roared off toward Miami, he suggested he would like to go to Havana. A stewardess shrugged off the idea.

"I thought it was a joke," Pat Overcast of Miami Springs, Fla., related later. "A lot of passengers say that."

The man drew a revolver from a briefcase to enforce his request.

"We're on our way," Capt. M. D. Guyot of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the pilot, said.

Guyot said the man was about six feet tall, weighed about 220 pounds and "would go from extreme friendliness and rage in the same instant." He instructed the pilot to radio Havana and "tell Fidel Red is coming."

At one point the hijacker became convinced the plane was on the ground in Cuba and tried to get the crew "to open the door at 10,000 feet," Guyot said. In Havana, he popped the door open before stairs were rolled up and dangled from the ledge until Cuban militiamen helped him down.

The United passengers were bused to Varadero also, but the Peruvian plane's passengers and their Cuban hosts had filled the hotel rooms. And the 13 Americans got coffee and sandwiches instead of the steaks offered the Argentines.

The Peruvian plane returned to Miami Saturday night. Its passengers came back on two flights Sunday with the United group riding the second aircraft. The United Boeing 727 jet also returned Sunday. United officials said a passenger listed only a Mr. Helmey stayed behind.

The hijackings were the fourth and fifth of the year.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
STRIKE TWO

Traditionally, the post of Secretary of Interior has gone to a representative of one of our western states. President-elect Nixon set a new precedent by going to the very western-most of our States, Alaska, and chose Governor Walter Hickel. There are a lot of axes to be ground in the Department of Interior, and it was inevitable that there would be criticism of the appointment of Governor Hickel. The factions contending for favorable decisions in the department had hoped for a man more closely identified with the problems of conservation.

Thus, Governor Hickel had a strike against him because he was not committed to either camp, which is the best possible reason for Nixon's having selected him.

But the good Governor now has heard strike two called even before he sets foot in that monstrous Interior building, and he collected this one swinging. It seems that the reporters confronted Governor Hickel with the comments of some of his critics and one asked, in particular, how he felt about Julia Butler Hansen's lack of enthusiasm for his nomination.

"Who," said the Governor, "is Julia Butler Hansen?"

To be sure more people have heard of Spiro T. Agnew than Julia Butler Hansen, but if there is one man in the United States who should have known everything possible about her, right down to what kind of flowers she likes to keep on her office desk, it was Governor Walter Hickel.

For twenty years Julia Butler Hansen was a member of the State Legislature in the sovereign State of Washington. In 1960 she went to Washington, D. C., as Congresswoman from the Third District in that State and last year was appointed Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies.

In other words, Julia Butler Hansen is probably the most influential single member of the House of Representatives as far as appropriations for the Department of Interior are concerned.

It is good that Governor Hickel is accustomed to the sometimes bitter cold of Alaska. We suspect it will be as nothing compared with the atmosphere when he appears to present his first budget request and Madame Chairman begins to ask questions.

DON'T DESTROY OLD VALUES

A few weeks back an advertising piece arrived at our desk and inside we found a rather long, tapered nail with a rectangular head. We showed it about the office; of seven co-workers, only one knew, or could guess, what it was.

It was a horse-shoe nail.

An acquaintance who admires and collects such things, received a Brant decoy at Christmas. It was a beautifully hand-carved decoy of the prized wild Canadian goose. But the well-meaning friend who happened upon it had sandpapered and polished away every delicate coloring which remained on the weathered original - and then lacquered it. It ended up looking as much like a Brant decoy as a chocolate replica at the canda counter.

And then there was the man who received a brick at Christmas. It had been promised by a friend who knew the family association with a brick kiln which was being razed to make way for some new modern installation or other. The brick arrived, one of those last pieces rescued from the kiln site. It had been gilded.

It is such a fantastic age that even as young men circle the moon and send us photographs of our little earth from 240,000 miles into the universe, there are some of us trying to keep pace who had intimate and important experiences with brick kilns and horse-shoe nails in our lifetime. Those brick kilns were responsible for sturdy, warm homes which gave shelter and comfort to thousands of families across our land, and we've noted that they are particularly prized by a generation of newly rich who long to own, restore and refurbish them with modern gadgetry.

Before the supermarket deep-freeze, there were many homes which fancied a Brant goose, lured to the table by a decoy, as a welcome respite from smoked ham or corned beef. Many with such recollections are still active today; some of them rode, or walked and led horses to the blacksmith for shoes; some even milked cows, by hand, never dreaming that a machine would someday do the job. One that we know has the milking stool as a foot stool in his living room as a constant reminder. It is the way it was, and it can't be changed by gilding the bricks or polishing the decoys.

Old values mustn't be destroyed. They document our progress, not our backwardness; they make us proud, not decadent.

"THE CENSOR ALWAYS RINGS TWICE"

Censorship is an ugly word to most americans. Yet, our constituional right as a free people to read freely is one which needs to be strenuously guarded, always, if we are not eventually to succumb to the same kind of odious thought-control we see exercised in other countries around the globe. Unfortunately, there are among us individuals and groups who would infiltrate and weaken the very foundation of free thought spelled out and guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution of this country. Freedom to read is the basic right of free men in a democratic society. The men who write the Constitution meant it to be just that way. Neither time nor circumstances have diminished the essence of the democratic philosophy thus expressed.

Freedom cannot possibly exist if special interest groups are allowed to determine what we shall or shall not read. The danger to our freedom lies, paradoxically, in the fact of freedom itself. For would-be censors, too, enjoy the freedom to speak out. And, speak out they can, and do. The best defense of freedom to read is in a constant awareness of, and prompt action to circumvent, any move which threatens an abridgment of the American right to read material on any subject.

Censorship can take many forms. For example, a St. Charles County group while not calling for outright book-banning has organized a move which, as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says, "is an ingenious gimmick. Instead of calling for an old-fashioned bookburning, it is demanding the labeling of all publications by writers who belong to 'subversive' organizations. They are not interferring with the freedom to read, they say, but are sure that such a label on a book or magazine, rather like the 'poison' label on a bottle, will insure that 'the reading material loses 99 percent of its effectiveness and is no longer dangerous'". The Post-Dispatch goes on to point out that Dr. Spock's baby book is one of their targets, for while the book may not be subversive the author, because of his anti-draft conviction, would be classified as subversive.

The Kansas City Star, referring to the same St. Charles County case said, "Censorship is a tricky business. To do it well, one has to be able to read with a measure of intelligence. And, anyone who can do that generally has sense enough to trust others to do the same - and to judge the contents for themselves".

In the forefront of the struggle to maintain the principle of free-reading are several powerful groups. There are, first, the news media to whom "free press" means exactly that, the public libraries and, the Missouri, the Freedom of Information Center, supported largely by the free press, at the University of Missouri.

The American Library Association "Library Bill of Rights", takes the firm stand that "censorship should be challenged by libraries in the maintenance of their responsibility to provide public information and enlightenment". And further, "libraries should cooperate with all persons and groups concerned with resisting abridgment of free expression and free access to ideas".

In support of the ALA position on censorship, the Missouri Library Association voted unanimously at its annual Conference last October, to take positive action aimed at insuring freedom to read. The MLA Intellectual Freedom Committee set forth the guidelines for this effort, which calls on qualified librarians to select and acquire books and other materials without interference from idividuals or groups, and to oppose restrictive legislation at state, local or school district levels. Questions. Questions of censorship which arise may, if necessary, be aired through public hearings at which all sides of the issues will be presented to the library governing body and the general public.

On February 7, a Conference on Censorship will be held on the University of Missouri campus at Columbia under the sponsorship of the Freedom of Information Center, the Missouri Library Association and the Missouri State Library. The Conference theme, "The Censor Always Rings Twice", underscores the necessity for free people to be concerned and to take prompt action on censorship issues - otherwise censorship tends to recur in frequency and force.

The Conference is important to everyone having an interest in the matter of free access to all reading material. Opportunity will be provided for those attending to engage in discussion of the problem and hear key speakers and view exhibits dealing with the subject.

The question of censorship is one in which every American has a vested interest. Conferences such as this one are all to the good; for they are a means of providing an understanding of the censorship problem in its many ramifications.

Further details on the Conference can be obtained by writing Freedom of Information Center, Box 858, Columbia, Missouri, 65201.

NEW YORK (AP) - What's nice guy like Tony Curtis doing strangling women, even if it is only a film?

Curtis chuckled when he was jokingly asked the question, then said seriously, "It's a wonder there isn't more of it."

He then went into a rather philosophical discussion of the socio-psychological background of the sexually-perverted killer who terriorized the Boston area for more than a year, slaying at least 13 women - the part Curtis portrays in "The Boston Strangler."

It didn't sound much like the tough kid from the slums of Manhattan, who became a romantic comedy actor.

It was a "new" Curtis. No gray flannel suit scene for him any more, but short jacket, scarf tie and necklace of mementoes. Plus a new wife, outside the film fold. Following actresses Janet Leigh and Christine Kaufmann into the role of Mrs. Curtis is Leslie Allen, 24, a former model from Boston.

As something of a left-handed compliment, the Tony Curtis of "The Boston Strangler" neither looks like the handsome 43-year-old Tony Curtis who fans of "Some Like It Hot" "Operation Petticoat" and "Who Was That Lady" came to love, laughingly, nor acts like the Tony Curtis of romantic comedy success.

The light comedy image disappears, physically and thespically.

"I wanted to do another kind of movie," he said, enjoying an outdoor chat at a New York "pocket park."

The title role in "The Boston Strangler" was a part he really wanted and he sought it as soon as he heard 20th-Century Fox had planned to film Ferold Frank's book.

"Fox was not enthused," Curtis recalled. "With all my comedy roles and all, they thought the audience wouldn't sit still for me as the strangler.

"So, I put on a wax putty nose, a big lump on my face and took my own photos and sent them to Fox. At least it showed them I could look the part."

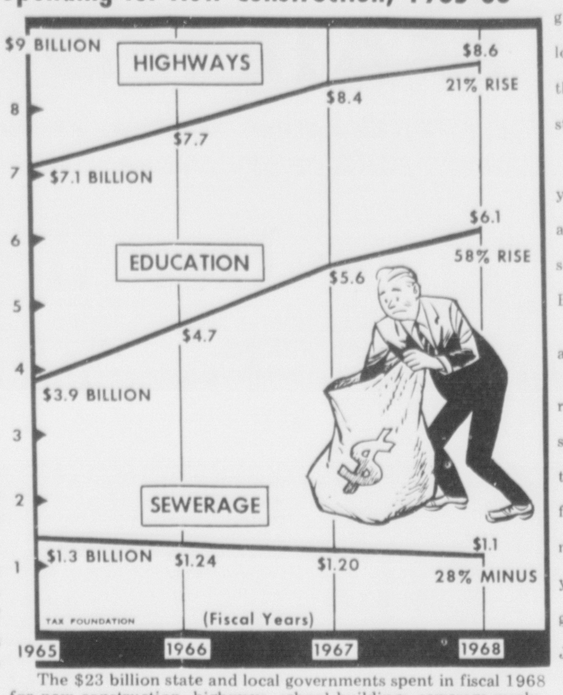
When it came to actual filming, he put on brown contact lenses to cover his baby blues, used a lip appliance to change the contour of his mouth - and to alter his speech - and carried lead weights around his waist to change the tempo of his walk.

And he read a great deal about Albert DeSalvo, who was claimed to be the Boston strangler. Curtis speaks with some authority when discussing the man he portrays in the film. His efforts, mental and physical, show how important the role is for Curtis, who hopes it will alter the course of his screen career, much as he attempted in 1957, with "Sweet Smell of Success," and followed with "The Defiant Ones," for which he got an Oscar nomination.

What's next for the man who proved his dramatic point in "The Boston Strangler".

The film role of gangster Bugsy Siegel. Hardly comedy.

Spending for New Construction, 1965-68



The $23 billion state and local governments spent in fiscal 1968 for new construction, highways, school buildings, sewerage works, hospitals, water supply, etc., was 9 percent greater than in 1967. State construction spending was up 5 percent; local, higher by 12 percent. The trend of three new construction items is shown.

Approximately one out of seven vehicles were rejected in Missouri during last year's voluntary vehicle safety-check program.

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports that 24,121 vehicles went through the safety-check lanes and 3,670 were rejected because of some unsafe item. A total of 6,465 unsafe items were found on the vehicles inspected.

Faulty front lights, tires and rear lights were the top three causes for rejection. Defective rear turn signals, front turn signals and brakes followed in that order.

The Vehicle Safety-Check Program is sponsored on he national level by the Auto Industries Highway Safety Committee in Washington, D.C. The State Highway Patrol is the coordinator of the program in Missouri.

Colonel E.I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Patrol Superintendent, called attention to the fact that of the six items most often named as cause for rejection, four could affect visibility. He noted that improperly adjusted headlights can fail to pick up a hazard in the road ahead or blind an oncoming driver. A burned-out bulb in a turn signal can literally leave other motorists in the dark about a driver's intentions.

'We can expect that most of those who went through the voluntary vehicle safety-check lanes thought their vehicles were in safe mechanical condition," Hockaday stated. "Yet, a good number of unsafe items were discovered on the vehicles that were inspected. The results of this voluntary program indicate the importance of having compulsory inspection of vehicles which is now effective in Missouri."

OPERATION

This don't hurt much. I guarantee,
You've needed this surgery long,
My gentle hands will point the way,
To a new life proud and strong,
So let my scalpel do the job,

Now, Bob, get hold of yourself,
No more will you sit and cry alone,
Abandoned on some dusty shelf.
Breathe deeply of this ether, Bob,
Let's see that old time grin,
Oh, nurse, I think he's fast asleep,
And now it's time to begin.
A deft snip here...a pluck right there,
Scalpel...sponge...and that suture,
A little off here...a snip off there,
And now, Bob, arise to your future.
That didn't hurt you, did it now?
We're through..you're on your own,
So fix your face, come on, get up,
And give me a kiss, my sweet Joan.

A maid who seemed to enjoy her work gave notice one day without warning.

"Why do you wish to leave?" the lady of the house asked her. "Is anything wrong?"

"I just can't stand the suspense in this house a minute more," the maid replied.

"Suspense? What do you mean?"

"It's the sign over my bed that says: "Watch ye. For ye know not when the master cometh.'"

THINKING TO RESTRAIN his wife's extravagence, the husband presented her with an account book and gave her fifty dollars.

"Write down what I give you one one page," he explained, "and on the opposite page write down what happens to it. That will enable you to know how much you have spent at the end of any given time."

When next her husband asked to see the book, his wife told him eagerly "I did just as you told me. See."

On one page was written: "Received $50."

On the opposite page was noted: "Spent it all."

Darned Good Show -- It is a flight of fancy to expect that U.S. policemen, like their British counterparts, will ever reach a mutual disarmament treaty with the underworld. Americans remain too wedded to their weapons.

But they might profitably study how the London police handled the recent orgy of demonstrations by 30,000 anti-Vietnam war and anti-American groups, whose behavior was not appreciably more refined than that of our own peace-lovers in Chicago.

The Bobbies did not even reach for their truncheons (the only weapons they carry) but literally used body English to keep the mobs under control. A thin blue line of 50 of them prevented one mob from rushing the American embassy.

In so doing, they took a lot of lumps and missed the satisfaction of cracking a lot of hairy heads. But they also won a clear-cut moral victory over the anarchists, while brillantly reinforcing their famous image as first-class, professional lawmen.

H.L. Hunt Says

"THE "GREAT COMPROMISE'

The next Amendment to the U.S. Constitution will be, in all probability, a change in the means of electing our President. Many methods have been proposed, each with its merits, and each with its shortcomings.

One method would abolish the Electoral College in its entirely, allowing the President and Vice President to be elected by direct popular vote.

Emotionally, this proposal sounds good. It sounds good today and it sounded good when the Constitution was written. However, our Founding Fathers recognized the fact then that the larger, more populous states would dominate the less populous ones in the Presidential Elections. The "Great Compromise" was thus reached--providing for the Electoral College--where ethnic and regional interests were taken into consideration in this most important election.

These interests were prevalent then and are even more so today. It is because of this balance of power in the choice of selecting our President that our Presidents have been of the highest character, maintaining an interest in all areas of the nation and not in just those states that elected them. Under the popular vote method, it would be possible for a dozen or fewer states to elect the President and his active interest would thus be reflected.

Of significant difference is the Congressional District Plan for reforming the Electoral College. Under this plan, the Electors would be chosen at local levels and therefore follow the wishes of their constituents. The Electors would be chosen, one for each Congressional District, plus two at-large, equaling the U.S. Senators in each State, and each pledged to vote for a specific candidate. The unit rule would thus be discarded and the same proficiency in electing our Presidents, only at a more equitable balance, would be maintained. HLH

Washington - Merry Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Black students Harass liberal colleges with threatening demands; Known Black revolutionary sparks trouble at Swarthmore; Colleges face problems in getting qualified Negro students

WASHINGTON - On December 23, Black students in several well known liberal colleges issued peremptory demands on their college presidents which had all the earmarks of a revolutionary conspiracy

The colleges selected were Swarthmore, outside Philadelphia; Brandeis University, outside Boston; and Pembroke College, outside providence. The letters were similar to the unreasonable demands made at San Francisco state college, and followed the general revolutionary pattern set last year by Berlin students when they stormed the offices of Axel Springer, the anti-communist publisher.

Simultaneously Samuel R. Jordan, Jr., convicted of attempting to blow up selective service headquarters 83, 84 and 85 at Lancaster, Pa., and well known as a black revolutionary, turned up at Swarthmore, though not a student there, to inspire trouble. He worked with Fainia Davis, a Negro senior, who has publicly stated she intends to foment revolution after she graduates in February.

Jordan is out on bond, pending appeal on the interesting claim that Molotov cocktails which he tossed into the Lancaster draft board are not "explosive." Why Lancaster authorities have permitted Jordan to be at large to stir up revolutionary activities elsewhere is not known.

The letter submitted to the college presidents was signed at Swarthmore by Clinton Ethridge, a Negro senior who is head of the Swarthmore African-American students, and it began with a salute to President Courtney Smith: 'Merry Christmas!" It then warned that unless Smith accepted publicly and unequivocally certain "non-negotiable" demands by noon, January 7, "We will take action to see that they are accepted."

PROBLEM OF ENLISITNG NEGROES

The demands to admit more Negroes, ironically, were quite similar to plans which a faculty committee on admissions had been formulating in order to encourage more Negro students to attend. However, when the demands were presented in the form of non-negotiable threats, the ultimatum was turned down, and one day after the deadline of noon, January 7, passed, the black militants at Swarthmore chainlocked the door on the administration building and took over the administrative office of the college.

Simultaneously, members of the faculty received 15 telegrams from Bayard Rustin, the Negro leader, all in identical language, asking for acceptance of the demands. Rustin, a former member of the young communist league, has of late been one of the more moderate Negro leaders.

Ironically, Swarthmore, Bryn Maur, Brandeis, Harvard, Haverfod and a long list of other colleges have been doing their best to encourage Negro enrollment. However, the problem has been to secure Negroes who can meet scholastic requirements. Generous scholarships are available for Negro students. In fact, Negroes occupy a privileged position when it comes to entering Ivy League colleges, and have far more economic opportunity than white students. However, deans of admission have taken the position that there is no use admitting an unprepared Negro student who is likely to flunk out in his first year.

Talent scouts have gone out, as in the days when Ivy League colleges were recruiting football players, to try to enlist qualified Negroes. Last year, Ohio Wesleyan offered a scholarship to a well qualified Negro Girl only to be outbid by the University of West Virginia, which offered the girl an over-all expense allowance of $4,500 annually.

Swarthmore, a year ago, spotted a well qualified Negro boy only to have him taken away by Harvard, which offered him a more liberal scholarship.

Following the ultimatums handed to colleges before Christmas, authorities sat down with black power leaders to explain their hope of admitting more Negroes, but also the scarcity of qualified Negroes. They were told by the black power group in Swarthmore to look south and west.

Actually Bryn Mawr has sent some talent scouts to the west coast, only to find that Reed College in Oregon, and occidental and Pomona colleges in California are also recruiting Negro students. Few are to be found. In the south, Atlanta University and other institutions are also on the alert for qualified Negroes. Mayor Ivan Allen of Atlanta has stated that Negro graduates have ample opportunities available, and that he has been seeking 400 Negro high school graduates for the Atlanta fire and police departments.

PEREMPTORY DEMANDS

Despite this, the African-American students at Swarthmore peremptorially demanded the dismissal of dean of admissions Frederick Hargadon for failure to admit more Negroes.

The great majority of students at these colleges has been out of sympathy with the militant Black minority; Likewise, the majority of the faculties. Clinton Ethridge, the Black power leader at Swarthmore, is certain to flunk, and also certain to claim he's being discriminated against. Real reason he is certain to flunk is that he has devoted so little time to his studies.

Samuel Jordan, the convicted Molotov cocktail thrower, was a senior at Franklin and Marshall College in Pennsylvania who, at 2:42 a.m. May 10, 1968, was seen by police with other Negro students departing from Lancaster with arms, and material for Molotov cocktails. At 3 a.m. Jordan was arrested, and found to be carrying a loaded 38 revolver and Molotov cocktail ingredients. A search warrant was sworn out, and his apartment was found to contain various ingredients for incendiary bombs. Jordan was the leader of the Franklin and Marshall Afro-American society. He was convicted September 20, then turned up at Swarthmore recently to direct revolutionary activities there.

Inside Labor

Dockers' Hook: President Nixon.s First Crisis: Waterfron-Crippling Strike

New York: -- For weeks, that one-man crisis-monger, longshoremen's strike leader, Teddy Gleason, has been awaiting a phone call from the skyscraper "White House" here, now teeming with Richard Nixon's cabinet members. Presidents always call when the nation's docks are paralyzed. But the presidency is in limbo.

Even if it weren't, the call might not have come. Nor will it ever.

Mr. Nixon and his Secretary of Labor, George Shultz, who never loses his cool, are determined not to go the route of John Kennedy and Arthur Goldberg. The new administration plans to be neutral even it it hurts -- and the three-week-old dockers' strike which is strangling Puerto Rico and the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts while the Great Lakes are freezing over, is hurting badly -- right across the nation and around the world.

A striking dockwallopers' strike always hurts. During the 1962 crisis, John Kennedy returned to Palm Beach from a conference with the British prime minister and telephoned Teddy Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA). Gleason, glistening, rushed from the shower.

The President asked him to call off the strike. As one fighitng Irishman to another, Gleason said he would if he could, but he couldn't. John Kennedy's voice quivered and cut away. Gleason quivered and had to be bedded down ill for two days.

That 34-day strike cost the nation some $2 billion. The dockers went out again in 1965. Again the call came. Again the strike spurted. This time costs skyrocketed to some $67 million a day -- or about $3 billion to the national economy.

By 1968, President Johnson, laready a sadder man, was wiser. He called in the prophetlike mediator, Dave Cole, long an adviser to presidents. Mr. Cole was weary of the labor-industrial jungle. But then, in effect, the President said to him:

In a two-coast waterfront strike now, the most serious question is: what happens when foreign commerce stand still? How much worse does it get? How much will it undermine the American dollar? What will happen to the world money market if this crisis lasts? This can have a chain reaction on the British pound and the franc, as well as on the dollar. This could be disastrous.

Then Lyndon Johnson told Mr. Cole to do his mightiest to avert a crippling waterfront stirke, or to wash it up by January 20.

Mr. Cole had been in just such a crisis once. The steelworkers had struck the American Locomotive works at Dunkirk, N.Y. This installation was the only producer of the nickel-lined pipe needed by the Savannah, Ga., hydrogen bomb plant. Then too, the presidency was in limbo.

Harry Truman was about to leave. Dwight Eisenhower and his young vice president, Richard Nixon, were about to take over. Mr. Cole called in the labor and management chiefs and ended the strike.

But dockers are a different breed. They're caught up in a rapidly automating industry and their hand book, like the buggy whip, soon will disappear.

So it does not seem that even Mr. Cole's talents and soft cajoling can settle this strike before the inauguaration. What then?

Truly, aside from war and peace, this becomes Ricahrd Nixon's first major crisis.

Already there are 1,000 unloaded freight cars bogging down the rail yards here. Thousands of other freight carriers are immobilized all the way from Boston to New Orleans. Tens of thousands of trucks are being idled. With sugar refineries in the lead, many plants are 'going down." The dock waterfront is the bottleneck of America-- the jugular.

Teddy Gleason and his ters colleagues, each from old fighting stock -- Executive Vice President Johnny Bowers and Vice President Tony Scotto - are out front. So are the shippers. For all of them there seems no retreat. This is the contract which will mold the industry for generations.

What will the new Presiden Nixon and his labor minister d with their explosive inheritance Their policy is to be neutral. Le the parties work it out or fight i out. But what of the dollar What of layoffs? What c permanently lost foreign trade

And if the new President ask the Congress for a specia compulsory law (how can h not, since this strike already ha been judged a threat to th safety and welfare of th nation?), will this whip up th controversy he has, for so lon planned to avoid?

And if he does go to the Hil will not the new Senate whi Sen. Edward Kennedy, secon ranking man on the Senate labo committee, fight him? Of cours he will.

And so, as in times of old, comes down to high noon f the dockwallopers' vetetra Teddy Gleason, and t President of the U.S.

Mr. Nixon's first crisis is tough one.

Pants for Parties

NEW YORK (AP)—Women attending the inaugural balls honoring President-elect Nixon will be admitted in pant suits and men can wear black tie, although white tie is recommended.

They're accepted these days, aren't they," Mark Evans, one of the ball's cochairmen, asked a group of fashion writers Thursday at the Hotel Pierre, Nixon's headquarters.

As the women chorused their affirmation, Evans said, "If you say so. . . Yes, women will be admitted in their formal drawers."

Evans and Mrs. Leslie C. Arends, wife of the Illinois congressman, also said that after much deliberation the chairmen had decided white tie was preferrable for the inaugural ball but that black tie would be optional.

Evans, Mrs. Arends, and another co-chairan, presented Mrs. Nixon with examples of the favors to be given to inaugural ball guests.

Guests sitting in $1,000 boxes will receive a red, white and blue 21-inch scarves emblazoned with the Nixon inaugural theme, "Forward Together."

In addition, the women will be given a gold filled bracelet with dangling square medallions of the inaugural seal and male guests will receive cuff links engraved with the seal.

State Fair Opens Opera

ST. LOUIS, MO. — The world stage premiere of the Rodgers and Hammerstein film musical success "State Fair" will officially open the fifty-first season of the St. Louis Municipal Opera in June, 1969, it was announced today by Edwin R. Culver III, President of the Municipal Theatre Association.

"We have scored a great achievement in obtaining the rights to stage 'State Fair,'" Culver said. "It was not an overnight accomplishment. We've been conferring and negotiating on legal technicalities with all parties concerned for more than a year and a half. We are much indebted to Richard Rodgers and the sons of the late Oscar Hammerstein II, William and James, as well as their attorney, Howard Reinheimer, for their zealous and continual efforts in securing the approval from the film producers and the estate of Phil Stong, from whose novel the film was adapted. We would have been sorely disappointed had our desire not ben finally brought to fruition."

"The story of 'State Fair' will truly lend itself to glorious spectacle and magnitude on the giant stage of the Municipal Theatre. Rodgers and William and James Hammerstein will personally assist productions director, Glenn Jordan, in the staging of the musical play and in the casting of the leading roles," Culver added.

Three different movie versions of "State Fair" have been produced. The first, in 1932, was a non-musical drama, starring the late Will Rogers. The first of the two musical versions, with Richard Rodgers writing the music and Hammerstein the lyrics, as well as helping adapt the screenplay from the novel, was in 1945, and the principal parts were sung by Dick Haymes and Jeanne Crain.

The 1945 version of the film included such currently popular Rodgers and Hammerstein songs as "It Might As Well Be Spring," "Our State Fair," "That's For Me," and "It's A Grand Night For Singing."

The latest and most successful musical revision was produced in 1962, featuring Pat Boone, Bobby Darrin, Pamela Tiffin, Ann-Margaret, Tom Ewell, and Alice Faye.

The story tells of the excitement, romance, heartache and joy surrounding the activities of a family during a state fair, all adding up to rollicking comedy and touching sincerity for the audience.

Experts Offer Advice

By MARY SCHURZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Close your eyes a little." That's the secret of a successful marriage according to one couple who ought to know—they've been wed for half a century.

It's also good advice for a number of young persons—including the daughter of comedian Bob Hope—who were married this weekend.

The experts were Mr. and Mrs. James J. Gibney of New York who were among 333 couples, all of whom married in 1919, at a mass celebration Sunday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

After repeating the vows they first exchanged 50 years ago, the Gibneys, who have four children, 15 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, shared some of thir marital philosophy.

"You can't have your own way. One has to give in," said Mrs. Gibeny when asked what she has learned in 50 years.

"Keep out of her way while she's doing the housework," said Gibney in reply to the same question.

"That means," said Mrs. Gibney, "he doesn't help."

"And," said Gibney, "I have learned to get home for meals on time. She gets very mad if I'm late."

New York wasn't the only place for remembering past romance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vaught of Bedford, Ind., observed their golden wedding anniversary Saturday by taking the elevator to the top of the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument in midtown Indianapolis — the spot where they were married.

On Jan. ll, 1919, Vaught, a World War I veteran, was still wearing his Marine uniform and the minister who married the young couple said there wasn't a better place for a man in uniform to wed.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Graves Pate of Nashville, Tenn., marked their anniversary with a train trip. For their honeymoon 50 years ago, they went to New Orleans and San Diego by rail. This year, they did the same thing.

This was a weekend also for young love as several wellknown persons were married Saturday or announced engagements.

Chris Noel, the leggy disk jockey who visited Vietnam as the U. S. answer to Hanoi Hanna, married Capt. Ty Herrington, a Green Beret officer who proposed in a helicopter. Chris, who has a twice-weekly show on Armed Forces Radio, is known in Vietnam for her miniskirt. But she wore a long white gown for her wedding in Palm Beach, Fla.

Another Vietnam "veteran" figured prominently in a wedding —as the father of the bride. Comedian Bob Hope, who has entertained the troops overseas for many years, escorted his daughter Linda, 28, down the aisle in North Hollywood as she was married to Nathaniel G. Lande, 34, a movie director.

A soldier from Vietnam whose gaily decorated love letters drew the attention of postal employes was married in Saddle Brook, N.J. Among the guests were several clerks. They represented postal employes who became concerned when the letters stopped coming and wrote to Marianne. They learned Gordon stopped writing when he was ordered home.

A hospital chapel was the setting for the wedding of Pueblo crewman Edward Russell and Sharon McCartney. Russell, who was supposed to marry Sharon Oct. 12, but who had to postpone the wedding because of his captivity in North Korea, is being kept in the U.S. Naval Hospital at San Diego for observation along with his fellow crewmen.

And a wedding to come — that of Jane Cameron, daughter of U.S. Sen. and Mrs. Philip A. Hart, to Peter S. Conserva of Devon, Pa. The daughter of the Michigan Democrat is a nursing student at Villanova. Conserva teaches in Philadelphia. The Harts announced the engagement and said an August wedding was planned.

"AFL Here to Stay" Cracks Joe the Lip

By STRATTON L. DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI AP - Joe Namath had just led his New York Jets to a stunning 16-7 victory over the Baltimore Colts. He obviously was elated.

He also was thirsty, dirty, tired and bitter.

"Are you one of those NFL writers?" he asked each reporter who approached him in the Jets dressing room. "Well, listen," he would say with a scowl, "AFL is here to stay and you'd better believe it. I guarantee."

Stripped to his football pants and socks, Namath slouched on a bench and the well wishers and writers strained to get near him. It was at least 100 degrees in the crowded Jets dressing room and he was soaked with perspiration. His long black mane hung down in damp ringlets.

"Nobody believed we would win," he kept saying. "Nobody but the New York fans gave us a chance. Where were you guys?"

At least 50 reporters were ringed around him scribbling down every word. "Hey, somebody get me another Pepsi," he yelled. As if by magic, a full cup was pressed into his hands and four others were set down beside him.

"Hey brother, watch it,' he said to a photographer whose foot was dangerously close to the soft drink supply.

"I want everybody to take notice," he said. "There's no champagne in the dressing room of the new world champions."

After about 20 minutes of questions and congratulations, a little man wearing a Super Bowl straw hat pushed through and tapped Joe on the arm, almost timidly.

"Hey, Dad," he yelled "where'd you get that hat?" Then they hugged each other.

"What are you shaking about?" John Namath asked his famous son. "I'm a little weak right now Dad,' was the reply.

Joe's mother was not at the game. "She never comes," ne said. "Her nerves won't stand it, she swells up like a baloon."

After an hour, Joe made his way to the training table and began cutting away the tape on his feet and knees. The puple scars on his knees stood out in contrast against the white flesh.

They were the only signs of wear on the 25-year-old former Alabama star who made football history when he signed a $400,000 contract wih the Jets four years ago.

"Do you feel sorry for Morrall?" he was asked.

"Better him than me," replied Joe. "Do you think anyone would be crying for me now if the Colts had won? Hah:"

Joe turned and tossed a wad of tape at a Jets trainer. It missed by a foot. 'Excuse me," he said, "I overthrew."

"He's the cock of the walk now," whispered one writer. "Yes," said another, "he's on top. There's nobody like him."

Joe was angered when somebody asked him if the Super Bowl had been his greatest game.

"You must be one of them NFL writers," he sneered. "Just because we beat an NFL team doesn't mean it was out best game.

"I was confident we would win....we all were," he said "Confidence is one thing another confidence is something else. If we didn't have confidence we shouldn't have been here."

Joe's outspoken victory predictions made headlines before the game and many writers forecast he would pay for his remarks when the Colts' defensive line got a shot at him But they never really got to him.

"I got good protection," he said. "It was a team effort. Everybody was great."

Asked how the Colts compare with AFL teams, Namath said: "It's hard to say. On any given day one of our better teams could whip one of their better teams and vice versa.

Charleston Next Match For Bulldogs

Sikeston's Bulldogs hope to keep their winning streak with them as they go against the Charleston BlueJays on the opponents court Friday.

Sikeston will be shooting for its eighth win of the season and add another win to their SEMO conference slate which stands at 1-0 presently after Saturday's win at Kennett.

Sikeston is well on its way to an outstanding season as they have thus far suffered only one defeat in eight roundball outings. This loss came at the hands of undefeated Oran during the Bloomfield Christmas Tournament.

Sikeston should be well-rested for the duel, since this will their only game of the week.

Charleston won a non-conference game against Fulton County in basketball competition last Friday.

Probable varsity starters for Sikeston will be Fred Towns, Dennis Snelling, Aurthur Jackson, Bruce Farris, and Larry Lawrence. The junior varsity squad is expected go with Hunt, Tucker, King, McCauly, and Jones.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why is the ordinary dinner jacket called a "tuxedo"?

A—The name is said to have originated with a country club at Tuxedo Park, N.Y., where this type of dinner jacket was first worn.

Q—What is meant by the expression, "His speech was graced with attic salt"?

A—The phrase is used to mean a certain wit or vigor of style in writing, in reference to the superior quality anciently attributed to Athenian works. The Roman style was heavier, less spirited.

GOOD BYE? One might get that impression, but both were battling for the rebound in Friday night's basketball game at Matthews between the Pirates and undefeated Oran Eagles. Shown are Don Eavns (42) of Oran and Clarence Brooks of Matthews. Oran retained its undefeated status, beating the Pirates 82-60 for its 17th straight win.

Bulldogs Take Pair From Indians

KENNETT Bulldog basketballers increased their proud record to 7-1 Saturday night as they defeated the Kennett Indians 62-55 and added it's first SEMO conference win while the junior varsity increased it's record to 3-1 as they outscored their opponents 57-47.

"Sikeston played a good game all around and especially showed their talents on defense," commented Coach N. P. McDaniel.

Sikeston made its biggest stride of the battle in the second quarter ad they outscored the Indians 20-13. Kennett put up its most successful fight in the final period of play as it outtallied Sikeston 16-12.

Fred Towns, the usual high-point man for the Bulldogs came up with 14 points and was outscored by junior Larry Lawrence who netted 18 - the high for the night.

Dennis Snelling and Arthur Jackson were also in double figures for Bulldogs, adding 14 and 11 points respectively. The other member of the Bulldog starting quintet, Bruce Farris - came through with five points.

Kennett's Ed McKinney led his fellow mates in their drive for victory with 15 points. Ed was also the leading rebounder for the Indians.

McKinney was followed in the scoring department by Randy Fingers with 14 and Larry Robinson with 10 points.

In the junior varsity duel, Sikeston got off to an even start with the Indians as both teams came up with 16 points in the first quarter. The Bulldogs led in the remaining quarters of action with their biggest margin being set in the second as they out pointed their competitors 13-7.

Sikeston had two players in double figures: Jim King put 13 through the goal and Gerrod Hunt came up with 11. King was the leading rebounder for Sikeston.

Gilmer was the high point player for the Indians as he put the pressure on the Bulldogs with 15. He was followed by the Indians only other double figure man, Sullinger, who tallied 10.

Harris Given Good Shot at Party Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—Selection of Fred Harris as Democratic national chairman—a prospect enhanced by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's weekend endorsement—would provide a broader national stage for an Oklahoma senator with star quality.

The folksy, good-looking Harris, who parts his dark hair down the middle, is a solid member of the Senate Establishment while maintaining firm ties among liberals. He already has stirred talk as a possible "sleeper" candidate for the 1972 presidential nomination.

Humphrey made official Saturday his suspected preference for Harris to succeed Lawrence F. O'Brien when the Democratic National Committee meets Tuesday. As titular head of the party, Humphrey's choice is almost certain to be accepted.

"I hope he will have your support," the vice president told the committee in a telegram.

"I appreciate the vice president's recommendation," said Harris in a statement. "I am grateful for the enthusiastic support of the national committee members and prominent Democrats from throughout the country."

While the 38-year-old senator, who worked his way from a farm boy to a Phi Beta Kappa key, indicated he had not made a final decision, one of his aides left little doubt that he would accept. "Chances are good that he is not going to say no if the committee wants him," the aide said.

Among other things, the chairman's job offers a chance to share credit with Humphrey for bringing about party reforms that the vice president says are needed to regain the White House.

Humphrey's telegram of endorsement followed separate meetings he held Thursday with Harris and former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina.

Sanford announced his withdrawal over the weekend and was replaced in dark horse speculation by New Jersey Gov. Richard Hughes.

After four years of doing his homework and earning membership in the Senate Club by not rocking the boat, Harris got some national statute last year when he was co-chairman of the Humphrey campaign along with Minnesota Sen. Walter Mondale.

His joining the Humphrey camp reportedly miffed the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to whom Harris had been close.

Harris, described by aides as "high strung" and who has been known to put away more than two packs of cigarettes a day, came to the Senate in 1964.

He whipped the well-known football coach, Bud Wilkinson, for the seat vacated by the death of Robert S. Kerr and won election to a full term in 1967.

A favorite game in Washington in the months after any general election is to speculate on winners or others who distinguish themselves in the campaign as possible presidential timber.

A dual role as senator and party spokesman combined with scrappiness and a good television style could put the name Harris right up there along with Kennedy, Muskie, Humphrey and McCarthy when the guessing begins in earnest.

New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell made just such a point in a television interview Sunday when he called Harris a "sleeper" possibility for 1972.

"He's smart," said Powell. "He's young."

There's another point that makes Harris an attractive choice for the chairmanship.

Although O'Brien suggested a fulltime committee chairman might be best for the party, selection of a senator would help Democratic congressional leaders keep control of shaping opposition policy while the GOP holds the White House.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said last week he wants to keep the policy initiative in Congress and is opposed to revival of the liberal advisory group that sprung up during the Eisenhower years. That group was often at odds with the Democratic congressional leadership.

Symington Files For Senate Seat

JEFFERSON CITY, MO. – U. S. Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) is today filing at 2:30 p.m. for reelection to the United States Senate.

Symington said: "I believe my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the Executive and Legislative branches of our Government, have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America."

"Based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve those two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again the citizens of Missouri give me their confidence and support," he continued.

Symington said he is "very grateful for the confidence the people of Missouri have given me over the past sixteen years in allowing me to represent them in the Senate, and I have done my best to honor that trust."

He said, "We Americans face problems unprecedented in our history, in the domestic as well as the international field. It is clear that upon our ability to cope with those problems rests the future security and well-being of our nation."

Symington had stated publicly last year that he would be a candidate for reelection in 1970. He was here today to attend Inauguration ceremonies.

Both as a businessman in Missouri and since his election to the Senate, Symington has been a strong supporter of industrial development throughout Missouri. He has continually emphasized and worked for water resource and scientific research projects of vital importance to Missouri's economy.

In the Senate, for many years he has been the only Senator of either party who serves on both the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees. He also serves on the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee and the Joint Economic Committee. Last year he was appointed as one of two Congressional representatives on the U. S. delegation at the United Nations.

Before entering government service, Symington was President of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Company of St. Louis. He resigned that position in 1945 when he became full-time chairman of the Surplus Property Board.

He then served in numerous other key positions including Assistant Secretary of War for Air, the first Secretary of the Air Force, Chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

I am very grateful for the confidence the people of Missouri have given me over the past sixteen years in allowing me to represent them in the United States Senate; and I have done my best to honor that trust.

Today we Americans face problems unprecedented in our history, in the domestic as well as the international field; and it is clear that upon our ability to cope with those problems rests the future security and well-being of our nation.

I believe that my many years in private business, in civic matters connected with the private sector, and in both the Executive and Legislative branches of our Government, have given me experience which will be of value in the continuing search for world peace and a finer America.

Accordingly, today I am filing for reelection to the United States Senate; and based on my record over the years of consistent effort to achieve those two vital goals, I respectfully ask that once again you give me your confidence and support.

ARMED FORCES

FT. ORD, CALIF. (AHTNC) Army Private Gary D. Dowdy, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Dowdy, Route 3, Dexter, Mo., completed eight weeks of advanced infantry training Dec. 19 at Ft. Ord, Calif.

He received specialized instruction in small unit tactics and in firing such weapons as the M-16 rifle, the M-60 machine gun and the 3.5-inch rocket launcher.

His wife, Ellen, lives on Star Route, Dexter, Mo.

U.S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC)–Army Private First Class Nathaniel E. Green, 18, son of Mrs. Alberta Green, 106 Alabama St., Sikeston, Mo., was assigned to the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam, Dec. 18.

Probe Slated Into Attacks on Senile Patients

ST. LOUIS (AP)–The circuit attorney's office and the city health department plan to investigate a series of attacks on senile Chronic Hospital patients with a caustic solution and the deaths of three of the victims.

Five patients were doused with the caustic between Aug. 14 and Jan. 7. Two died subsequently, but authorities attributed their deaths to natural causes.

The fifth victim, John Fortner, 55, was attacked last Tuesday and died Friday. Mrs. Helen Taylor, city coroner, said Fortner suffered lung collapse and internal throat burns, apparently caused by some type of lye solution.

James A. Roche, first assistant circuit attorney, said city officials would be asked to explain why the episodes were not reported to police until after the fourth attack on Dec. 31.

Roche said if an inquiry suggests that more investigation is needed, the matter will be referred to a grand jury.

Dr. Earl Smith, city health commissioner, said he would order an investigation of all recent deaths at the city-owned institution for the care of the chronically ill.

"This is incredible," Dr. Smith said. "It's the most amazing thing I've ever heard of. God knows how many others have died."

Police guards were stationed at the hospital to prevent a recurrence.

There was no suggested motive for the attacks. Apparently all occurred on the late night shift when the fewest number of staff members were on duty.

Joseph Shank, the hospital administrator, said all the victims were senile to some degree and none could speak or cry out.

Future of Reanimation Played Up

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Reanimation, the bringing back to life of someone who under present criteria might be presumed dead, has a big future in medicine, says a Soviet expert.

V. A. Negovsky, director of the Moscow Academy of Sciences' Reanimation Institute, said in an interview Sunday, "The struggle against death is an old aspiration among men, particularly the Russians."

The Soviet scientist, here to attend the World Congress on Death and Reanimation, said the study of reanimation has hurdled many obstacles. He added: "Reanimation will be the pre- eminent branch of medicine in the future."

Negovsky said that in the cases of sudden death, life is not completely lost until the brain stops functioning.

"We know well that the arrest of circulation and respiration signify a cessation of life, but we also know that not all organs and not all tissues die in the same moment,' he added.

"The nervous system in particular has a brief afterlife which, until a few years ago, was calculated at four minutes, but which is certainly more."

This bodily system, he said, could sometimes live up to half an hour after other vital functions had halted. He indicated that in some cases this half hour could make the difference between a corpse and a reanimated person.

"Circulation and respiration can be actively maintained through the use of artificial hearts and lungs," said Negovsky.

He recommended that doctors working on reanimation concentrate on heart cases, because heart disease is such a frequent cause of sudden deaths.

In an address to the congress Sunday, Dr. I. E. Ganelina, from the Pavlov Institute in Leningrad, said her work showed that good weather helped reanimate the virtually dead. Failures in attempts to reanimate, she added, tripled during days of gloomy weather compared with results on pleasant days.

Dr. V. Schrire of South Africa, director of the cardiac clinic at Cape Town's Groote Schuur hospital—site of the first human heart transplants—stated that most sudden deaths of internal causes occur at night. And most of these, he said, occur "precisely between midnight and 2 a.m.'

Industrial Gas

More than half of the 135.1 billion therms of natural gas consumed in the United States in 1967 went to the gas industry's 181,000 industrial customers.

'Give Me' Now Slogan Of Two Many Citizens

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Too many people in this country have shortened Patrick Henry's famous expression "Give me liberty or give me death" to simply "Give me," a naturalized United States citizen who now teaches American history, said Thursday.

David Doctorian, who also teaches French in the Shelbina, Mo schools, urged more than 100 Southeast Missouri elementary school principals, meeting at Southeast Missouri State College, to return to the time when students "get the rewards as well as the punishment they deserve."

"Rules ought to be enforced at all costs,' Doctorian said. "If they are not enforced, it is better to do away with them."

Otherwise, said the speaker, students will not learn respect for rules or laws and will leave school feeling that society owes them something. He decried those who look for excuses or blame society for lawlessness.

Doctorian is a native of Beirut, Lebanon. He came to the United States in 1950, virtually penniless, and worked his way through college, eventually earning three degrees. He became a citizen in 1963, a day he said he remembers "better than my birthday."

Adressing the area administrators on the "fourth R--responsibility," he said, "Without this, the other three (reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic) will not help us much in this country."

He conceded that "we do have injustices, inequalities, and problems." He added, "But what country does not?"

Doctorian also asked, "Should a small minority determine the future of a nation which is supposed to be democracy and a republic."

He said he feared this is what will happen unless educators begin now to do a better job of teaching love for country and duty toward it.

He criticized the news media for sometimes misrepresenting the strength of the various militant organizations.

The speaker was introduced by Vencil Wilson Poplar Bluff, president ofthe Southeast Missouri Department of Elementary School Principals.

Dr. David Strand, associate dean of Southeast Missouri State, welcomed the group to the campus and told them the college hopes to open bids on a new $2,292,000 education building 'in a month or two."

Wounded servicemen are flown to the vessel, where doctors, nurses and medical corpsmen provide treatment. Born with spina bifida (open spine) and hydrocephalus (water on the brain), Tracy began life with a slim chance for survival. Now, however, after five major operations, he can walk with the aid of braces and crutches and enjoys roughhousing with his older brother.

ANOTHER KIND OF AMMUNITION — Loaded down with assorted ordnance, Pfc Clarence Ellis has his hands full with a more peaceful type of ammunition for himself. Private Ellis, 20, of Knoxville, Tenn., is a rifleman with Company C, 1st Brigade, 25th Infantry Division. The unit was taking a break southeast of Tay Ninh City.

If You Were the Judge

Soliciting Former Clients Arouses Wrath of Grapes

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Mr. Grapes had a very successful business. He also had a very enterprising young employee named Jerry. And, while Mr. Grapes kept both feet on his desk, enjoying his success, Jerry kept both feet on the ground.

The result? Jerry left his employ one day and set himself up in his own business in direct competition with his erstwhile employer. It wasn't until he actively began to solicit his former employer's customers, however, that Jerry aroused the wrath of Grapes. Furious, Mr. Grapes raced to court and demanded that Jerry be ordered to stop stealing his customers.

"The boy's an ingrate," he complained to a judge. "After I taught him everything he knows about the business, he has the nerve to try to put me out of business."

"Free completion ," was Jerry's answer. "That's the name of the game. As a businessman, I've got every right to life, liberty and the pursuit of customers, anyone's!"

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order Jerry to stop putting the squeeze on Mr. Grapes by soliciting the latter's customers?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that as a general principal an employee, upon leaving his job, may solicit his former employer's customers unless their names were given to him in confidence or his expired contract of employment prohibits it.

Ann Landers

Pantsuit Upsets Suitor

Dear Ann Landers: The other evening I went to pick up my girl to take her to dinner. When she answered the door I said, "Hi, Harold." I thought it was her brother.

June had on one of those pantsuits. With her short haircut and a button-down collar she looked just like a guy. I told her I didn't like the way she looked and, furthermore, I was afraid they wouldn't let us into the Ritz Hotel dining room dressed that way. She gave me a black look and said, "I'll change but I think you are being very provincial." Her lower lip stuck out all evening and we had a rotten time.

Will you please tell me if I was wrong to say anything? I told June when we said good night that if I wanted to date somebody in trousers there are two guys in the office who have hinted they'd like to go out with me. She didn't care much for that remark.

I love June and don't want to have any trouble with her. Please tell me if you think a man has the right to express his views on how his girl looks? — CHILLED CHUCK

Dear Chuck: I do, indeed. Pantsuits are in vogue, and some women look smashing in them. If, however, a boyfriend or a husband prefers that the light of his life wear a skirt when she goes with him, his wishes should be respected.

Dear Ann Landers: Please don't think I am a selfish, possessive mother. Nothing could be further from the truth. The problem is the other set of in-laws.

My husband and I would enjoy being with our daughter and her husband for an occasional evening without the other in-laws monopolizing the conversation with 'their plans, trips, projects.'

Please understand, Ann, they are fine folks, but they are overwhelming. We can't get a word in edgewise. Whenever my husband and I return from an evening with the four of them we feel we could just as well have stayed at home.

What do you suggest? — MAINE DILEMMA

Dear Dil: Be honest with your daughter. Tell her you would prefer not to be part of a quartet, even if this means seeing her less often. In my opinion, your complaint is a valid one and you should speak up.

Dear Ann: Our favorite niece announced her engagement five months ago. We were all thrilled. The young man comes from a fine family and is in his senior year at Brown. The date was set for January 26. Several parties were given and gifts sent.

Yesterday we received a cryptic three-line note from the bride's mother. The wedding is off. No reason. Just "off." We feel she owes us an explanation. After all, we aren't strangers. Do you agree? — INSULTED

Dear In: No. The reasons are nobody's business. If you are a real friend you will spare them additional anxiety and ask no questions.

Ann Landers' new book, "Truth Is Stranger...," is a collection of her best columns over the past 13 years, plus scintillating and common sense essays especially produced for this book. Available at all bookstores for $4.95.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

War Souvenirs Displayed At Farmers Supply Hardware

50 years ago
January 13, 1919

Mrs. Roy Clodfelter was called to Essex Sunday last by the illness of her sister, Mrs. Stella Emory, who is suffering an attack of influenza.

The Farmers Supply Hardware has a very interesting array of souvenirs captured by an American soldier from German soldiers, on display in their window. The articles, which include a German helmet, a gas mask, a cap worn by a member of the Prussian Guards, the finest troops in the German Army, and a paper knife made from U.S. six inch cannon shells, were captured by Cpl. Samuel Earl Hicks, of Memphis, Tenn., a member of Battery B. 115th Field Artillery, and now with the Army of Occupation in Germany. The souvenirs were loaned to D.H. White of White-Dooroh Wholesale Grocery Co. here, by a young lady friend of Cpl. Hicks.

The basketball team of Sikeston went to Caruthersville last Friday for a game with the local high school team. Sikeston won the game with a score of 25 to 13, after giving a very satisfactory performance of good playing. On Saturday night the team was scheduled to play Portageville in that city, and came off losers by a score of 21-13.

Elisha Johnson, for 32 years a farmer on the Haywood farm, two miles north of Sikeston, succumbed Sunday evening from heart trouble, at the age of 59 years and 19 days.

Louis Watkins remembered the editor's family with a generous helping of country sausage.

In a round about way we learn that we are to have another daughter-in-law. We now have two that we are very proud of and will welcome the third with all the sincerity that we possess. That will leave us two boys that give promise of making worthy husbands for some girls. We think of these daughter-in-law as we do our own girls, and would protect and divide our crusts with them to the last. Pardon us again for saying how happy it makes us in our declining days to look upon this big family of children who are such an honor to us.

Seven-Mile Lake at Wolf Island

CHARLESTON - Jim Wallace of Charleston, president of the Mississippi County Recreation Association, has announced a cooperative venture by several agencies that will greatly improve fishing conditions in Wolf Island Chute within the next year or two.

He reports that a representative of the Kentucky Highway Department, residents and landowners on Wolf Island and members of the Recreation Association met with the Mississippi County Court on DEc. 30 to discuss plans for a dam and roadway across Wolf Island Chute and a tentative agreement was reached before the meeting adjounred.

The action was apparently initiated by the Kentucky Highway Department at the request of people who live and farm on Wolf Island, which is in Kentucky, for a better road access to the island. At present the only road access is at the north end of the island where an open concrete "low water bridge" crosses the chute. This crossing is low and is covered with water every year.

The proposal for a new entrance consists of the construction of a new earth fill dam across the Wolf Island Chute about two miles south and one mile east of the Wolf Island post office. This road is laready graveled from Route 77 almost to the levee and might be called and extension of "Perryman Lane" and runs along the south side of the Ringo Farms. The proposed land fill would be about 200 feet long and would be surfaced with gravel and connected to exisiting roads on both sides of the Chute. It would be protected from washing by broken concrete blocks and road building debris.

It would be at an elevation high enough that it would require a river stage of about 45 feet at Cairo to cover it. A large cluvert will allow rain water entering the chute to escape.

This bonus for local fishermen would impound all water in the chute from the dam northward to the mouth ... a distance of about seven miles. It would be refilled each time the river entered the north end of the chute. It is estimated that at many points the water would be as much as 20 feet deep, even in the summer months.

Cost of the bill is estimated at approximately $5,000 which will be borne one-half by the Kentucky Highway Department, and the balance by Missouri interests. The Mississippi County Court will participate in the road building expense, along with local landowners and fishermen.

It is hoped that the work will be completed this summer.

Russian Post

Russia once established a post on the coast of California. In 1812, a group of Russian fur traders established Fort Ross, less than 100 miles north of San Francisco, but they sold their land in 1841 and left the country.

Complaint On Club Adjusted

The Missouri Commission on Human Rights has satisfactorily adjusted a complaint by nine negroes against Sands Lounge, 1129 Malone, Sikeston.

Commission Executive Director Richard E. Risk announced that Field Representative Lewis L. Akenhead of Sikeston has adjusted the complaint, which had been fired under the State Public Accommodations Act.

The complainants had alleged that they entered the Sanus lounge April 24, 1968, went to a table and sat down. A waitress came to the table, and before anyone spoke to her, told the group they could buy beer only if they would take it outside and drink it elsewhere.

Investigation revealed probable cause to believe racial discrimination occurred and the waitress was carrying out the wishes of the owner in denying service because of race.

H.C. Linderman, owner of Sands Lounge, now has agreed to:

- Advice each of the complainants they may use the establishment on the same conditions as the general public.

--Display the state public accomodations poster.

--Admit and serve all patrons without discrimination or segregation because of race, color, creed, religion, national origin or ancestry.

--Instruct his employes to stop directing negro customers to drink their beverages off the premises.

Injured Pair Endures Half-Hour Car Ride With Dead Driver

PLAINVILLE, Kan. (AP)--A critically injured father and son endured a half-hour nightmare Saturday, lying helpless in a car running amuck in a Kansas wheat field with a dead driver at the wheel.

Harold Simons, 39, of Stockton, Kan., and his 5-year-old son, Paul, were injured in a traffic accident that killed his wife, Joan, and injured another son, Terry, 4, and the driver of the second car involved.

Ray Balderson, 65, former sheriff of Rush County, stopped to aid the victims of the accident. He volunteered to drive Simons and Paul to a Plainville hospital because the ambulance summoned could not accomodate all the injured.

Trooper Bob Norton of the Kansas Highway Patrol said Balderson suffered an apparent heart heart attack about two miles north of Plainville. Balderson's car crashed through a fence and churned a twisting course across the field, finally stopping about a mile from where it left the road.

Simons managed to get out of the car and crawl about 100 yards away to a farmhouse.

Norton said Simons was unable to speak well because of his injuries. He said Simons scratched on the side of the house and got no response. Finally he made it to the front door and knocked.

The occupants of the farmhouse called authorities and Simons and his son were finally taken to the hospital.

Norton said Balderson's berserk car plowed through the field "possibly as long as 30 minutes" before it finally came to a stop."

The traffic accident that set the stage for the bizarre incident happened on U.S. 183 about five miles north of Plainville.

Norton said a car driven by Paul Robles, 22, of Natoma, Kan ran off the highway and swerved back onto the road into the path of the Simons car.

All the injured were treated at Plainville and transferred to a Hays hospital. Simons and his sons were reported in critical condition and Robles in fair condition.

Hearnes First to Be Sworn in for Second 4-Year Term

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)--Democrat Warren E. Hearnes is the first Missouri governor to be sworn in for a second consecutive four--year term but the second governor to succeed himself.

In 1829, a Jeffersonian Democrat, John Miller, was sworn in for a full term after serving out the unexpired term of his predecessor, who died.

In modern times, the late Gov. Phil M. Donnelly served two four--year terms but they were not consecutive.
